A VERY good friend of the College and a loyal alumnus suggested the preparation of a publication for the purpose of informing foundations, industry and other potential donators of gifts to Middlebury of the College's urgent need for funds. Our friend said that he would pay all the costs of such a brochure to be used as a promotional piece of the Middlebury Development Program.

A handsomely illustrated brochure of 40 pages entitled MIDDLEBURY—An Investment in Youth has been prepared and is being distributed to sources of possible gifts. Copies have also been mailed to Alumni Fund Area Chairman. Due to reasons of economy it is not possible to send each member of the Middlebury family a copy—as much as we would like to!

It is impossible in the limited space of the President's Page to give a complete synopsis of MIDDLEBURY—An Investment in Youth. However, I thought that you might be interested in some of the following comments made in the brochure about the needs of the College.

THE FACULTY — "Middlebury's leadership in education through the past century and a half has stemmed from an eminent and competent faculty. Here is the College's greatest strength. Thus, it is easy to recognize why Middlebury has placed foremost among the pressing needs in current operations an improved compensation for her academic staff.

"The Middlebury teacher first of all looks for good minds to train. Then he wants opportunity, encouragement and facilities to carry on the work to which he has dedicated his life. And he must be able to maintain reasonable living standards. Middlebury . . . faces the very serious problem of proper faculty salary levels.

"Unless this condition is improved, Middlebury stands in peril of losing to other institutions and to industry, her most valued asset, namely, an instruction staff that has brought to this campus outstanding ability in many important fields of modern education.

"In recent years tuition increases have enabled Middlebury to make modest increases in faculty salaries. Presently and in the years ahead, of primary concern to the College is the necessity for finding other means to finance salaries that will attract and hold competent teachers. Our educational standards and our contribution to society will always depend upon the excellence of our faculty. A larger endowment and a larger income from unrestricted annual gifts are needed to meet these objectives."

SCHOLARSHIP FUNDS—" . . . To maintain Middlebury standards, the College must continue to offer the opportunity for a Middlebury education to men and women of the highest caliber without regard to financial status. However, increased educational costs since the end of World War II have greatly handicapped the College's Scholarship Program. The inflation generated by the war created a need at Middlebury for additional income for scholarships. Ideally, such funds should be supplied by endowment. The Alumni of Middlebury, however, without waiting for the accumulation of endowment, have helped greatly to meet the scholarship needs of students by annual contributions made through the Alumni Fund.

"In order to keep the door open to ambitious young people, Middlebury must have additional endowment for scholarships."

LIFE OUTSIDE THE CLASSROOM—"All youth need to develop and maintain physical fitness and mental health. Middlebury, a strong advocate of this policy, believes that extra-curricular activities are an important supplement to the classroom and that they play a necessary part in the development of the all-around man and woman. To this end, Middlebury strives to provide excellent recreational facilities for the physical exercise for her students. Two of the Development Program goals—an artificial ice rink in the Memorial Field House, and a ski lift at the College Snow Bowl—have been accomplished. An artificial rink has been installed in the Field House and a Poma Ski Lift is now in use in the Snow Bowl."

"At this time we are free to reveal that the artificial ice rink was made possible by a gift of $50,000 to the College by Mrs. Charles Baker Wright before her recent death.

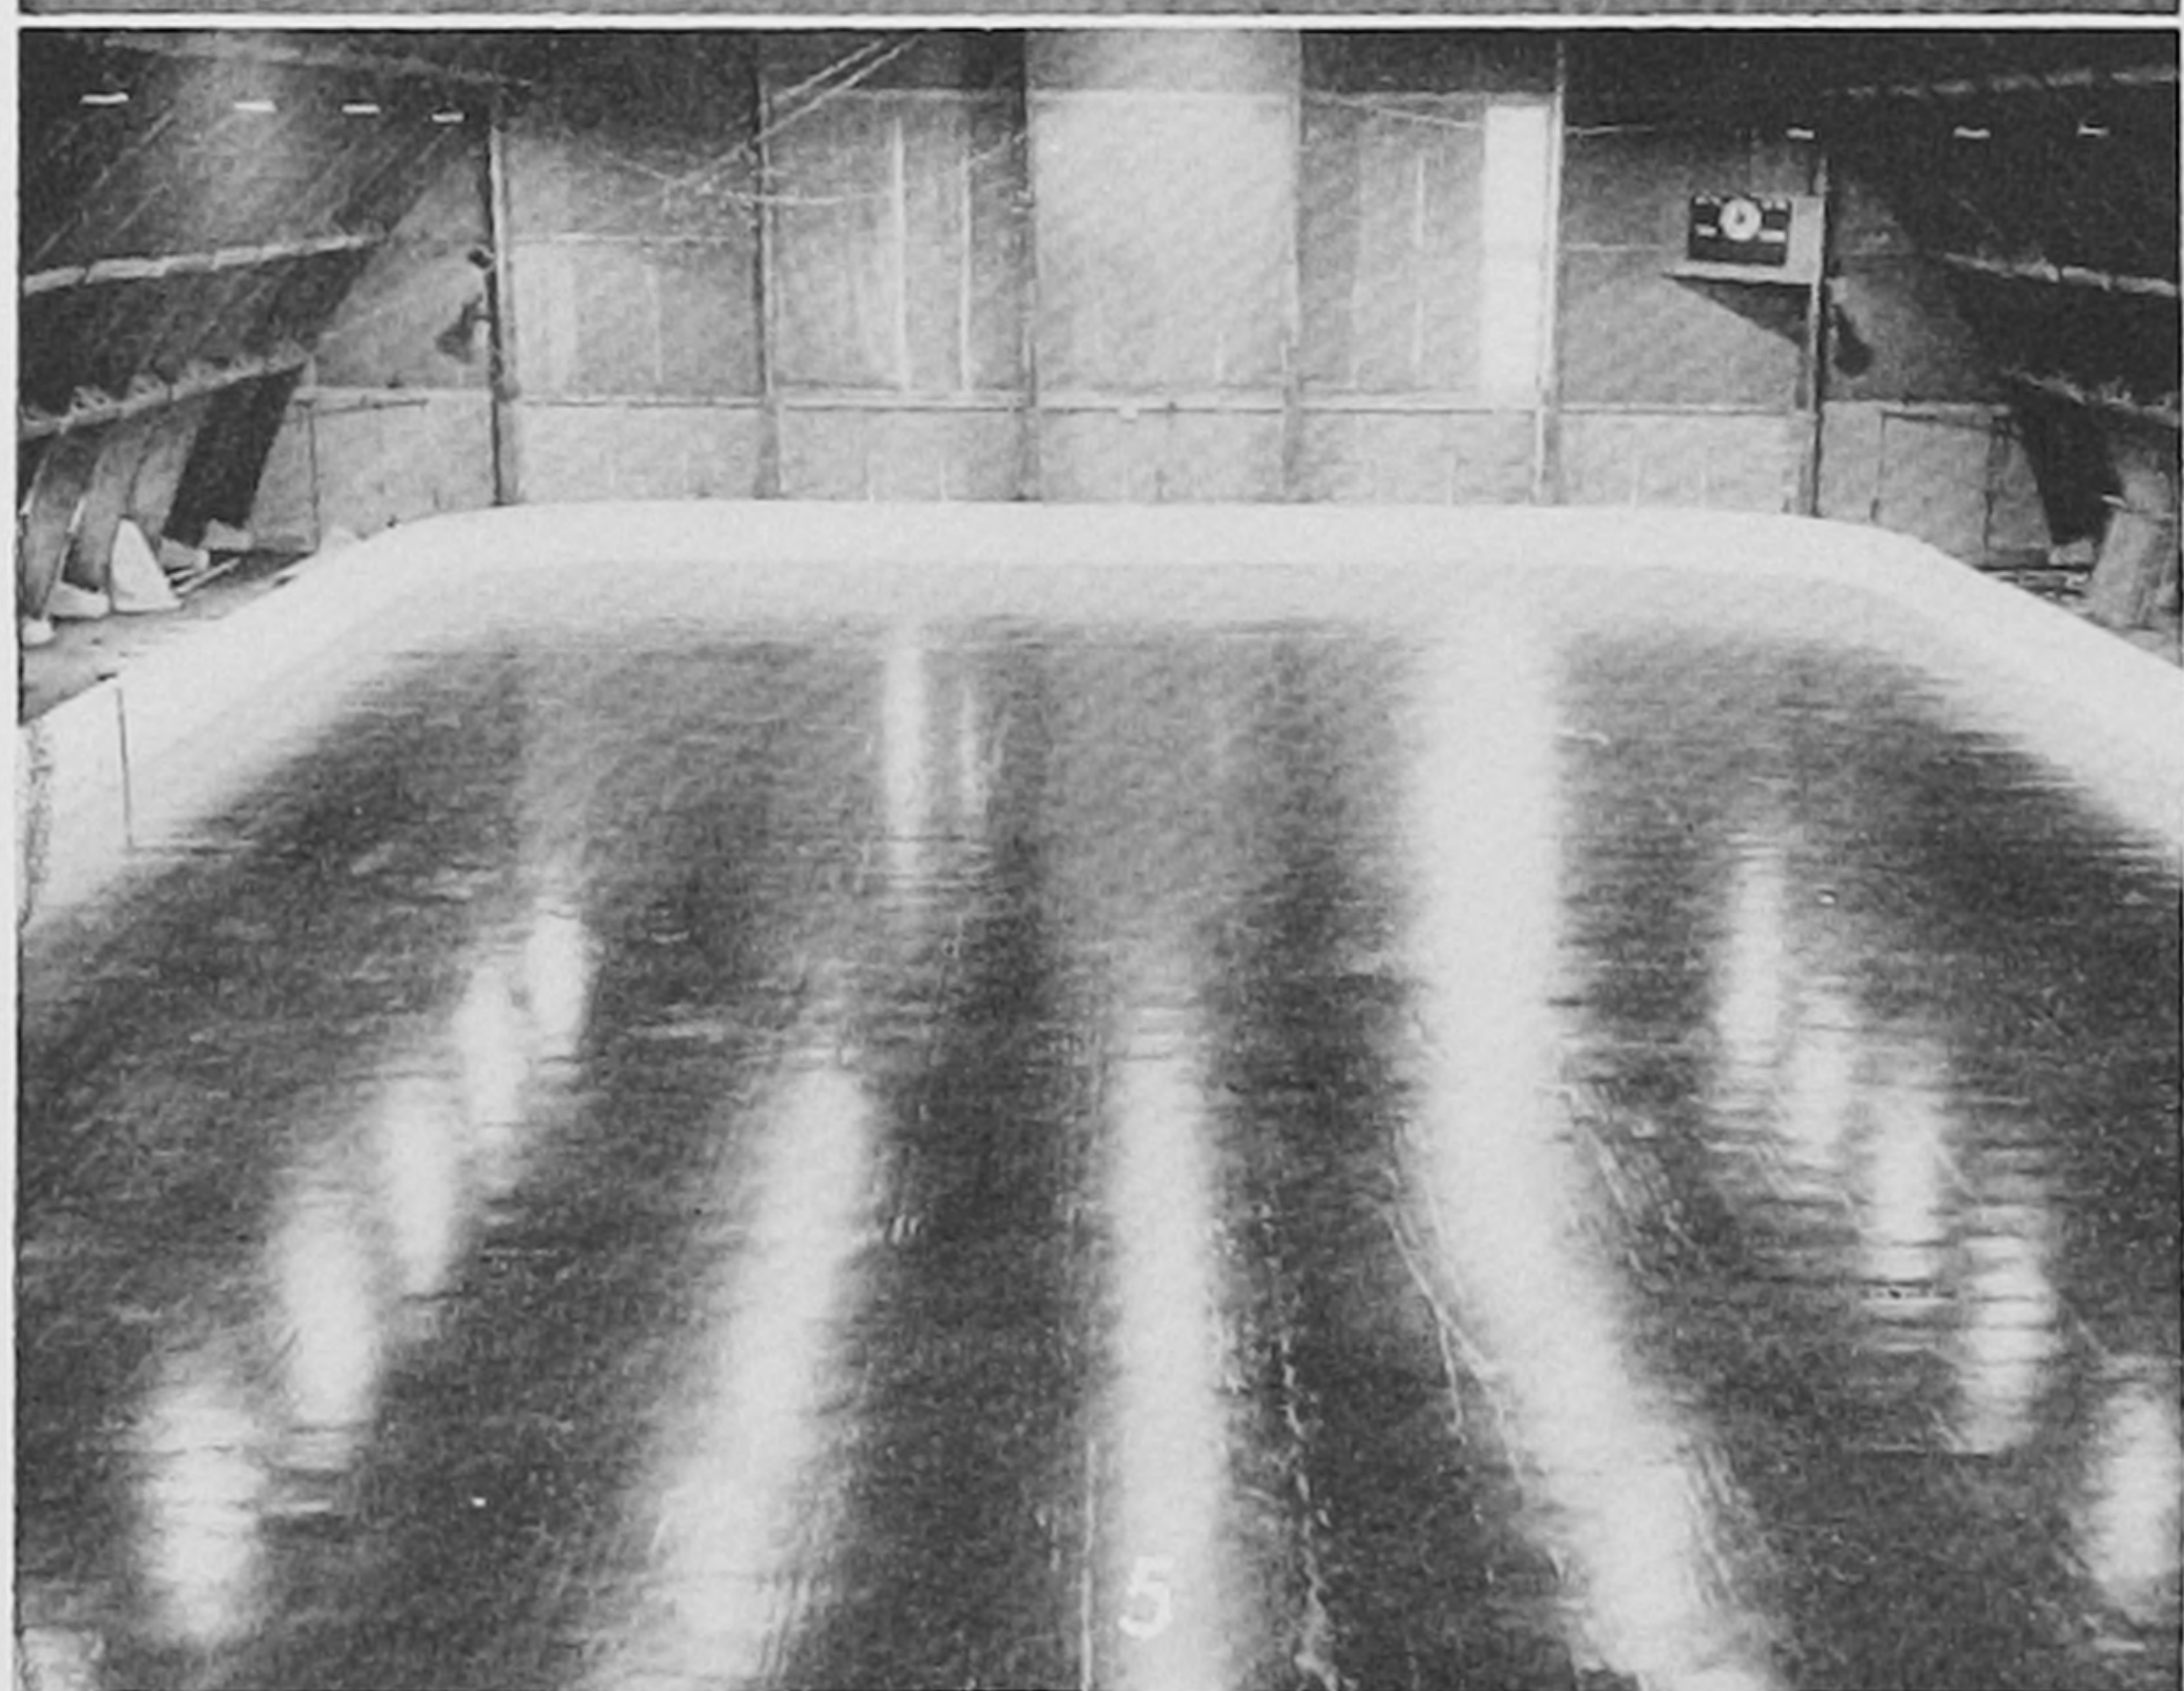

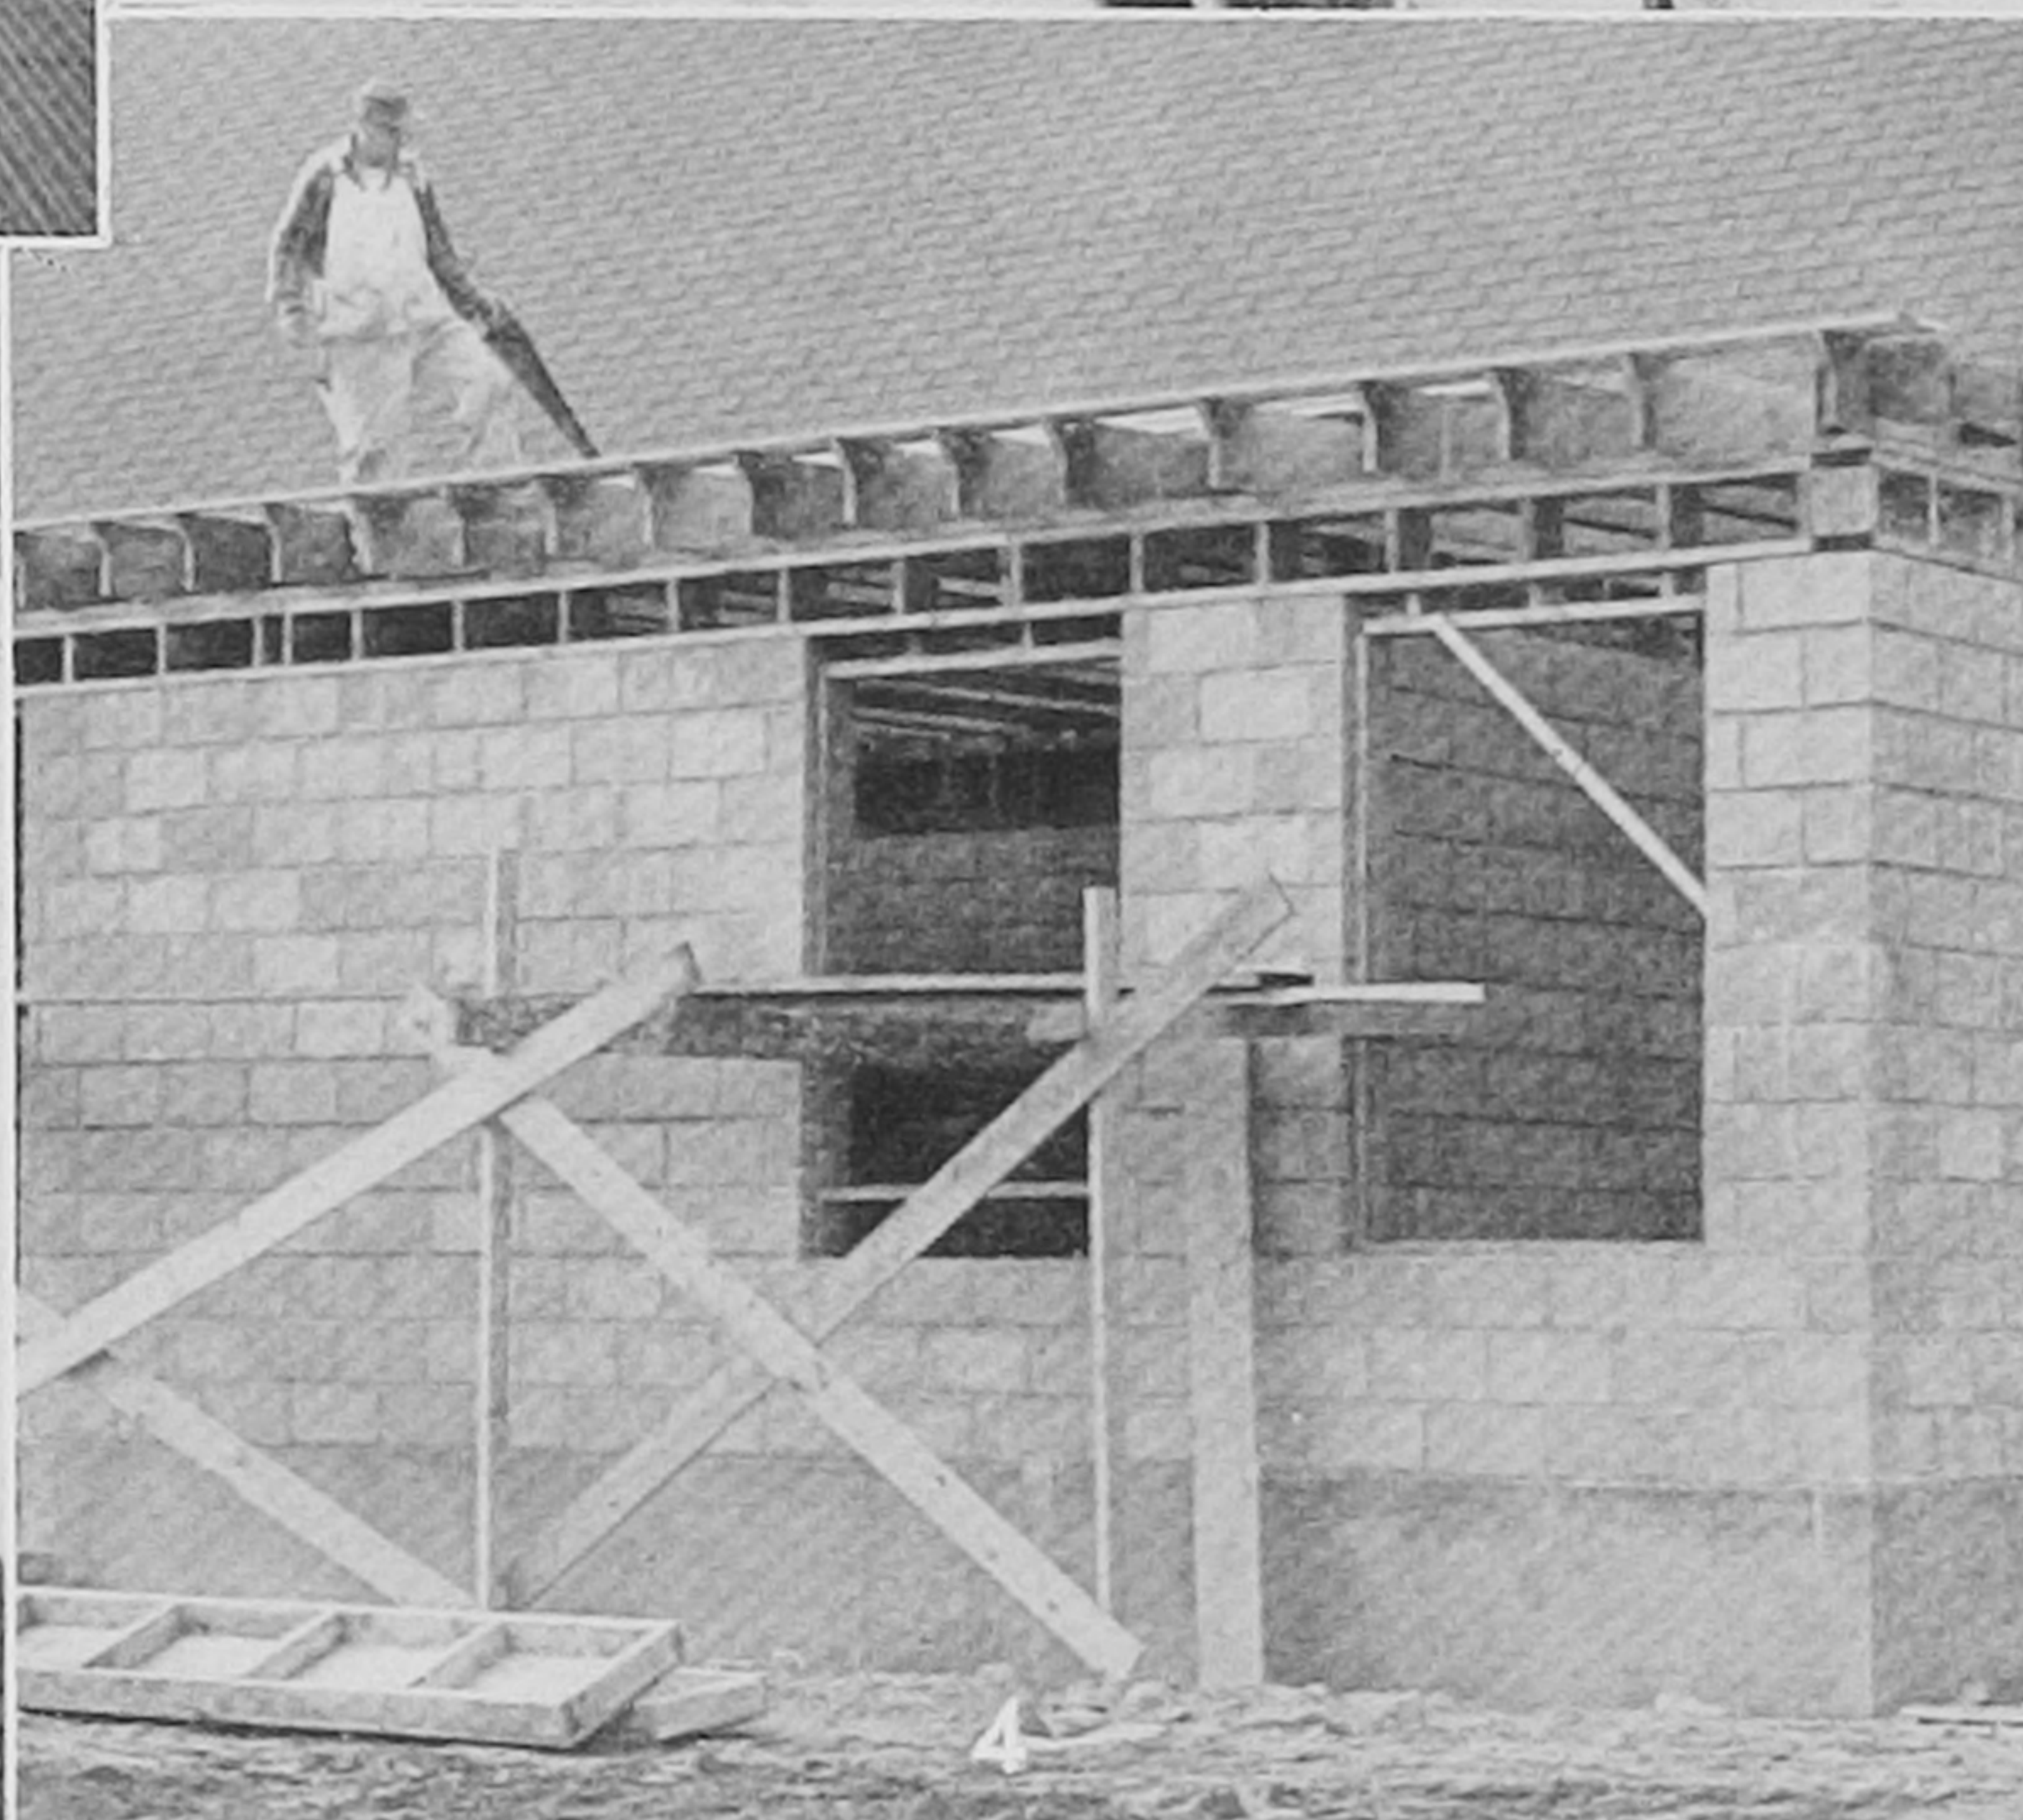

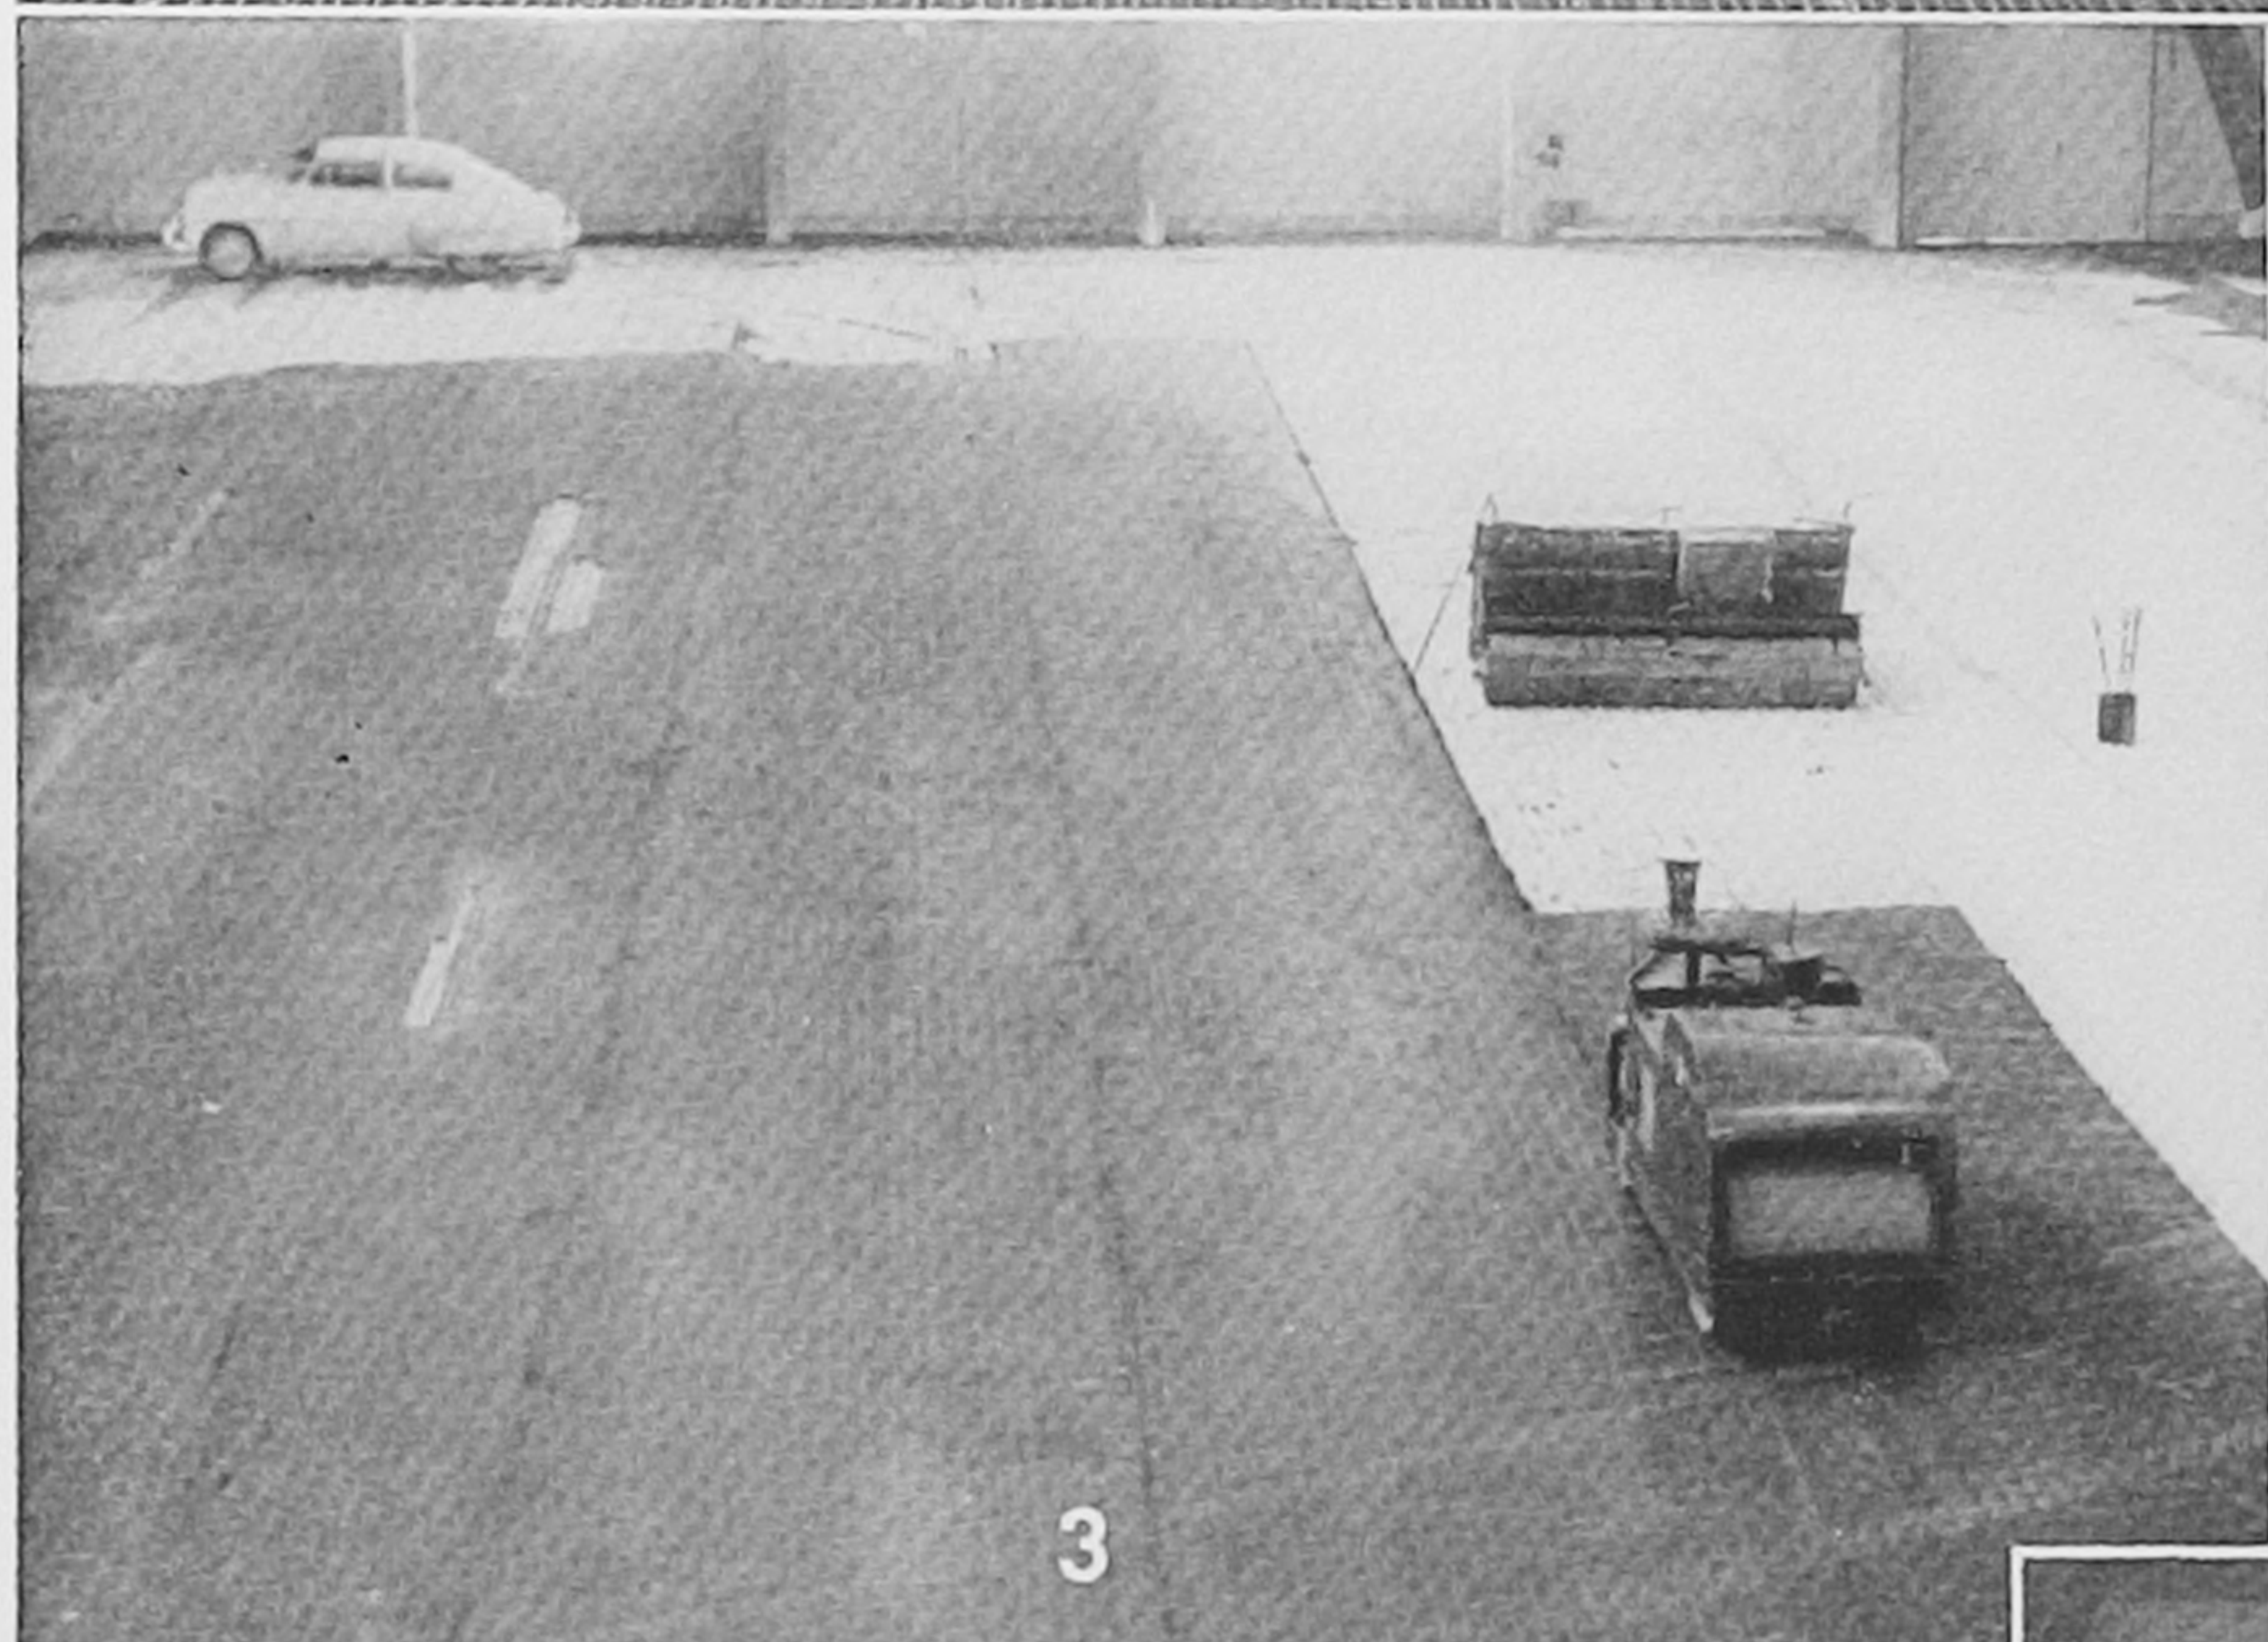

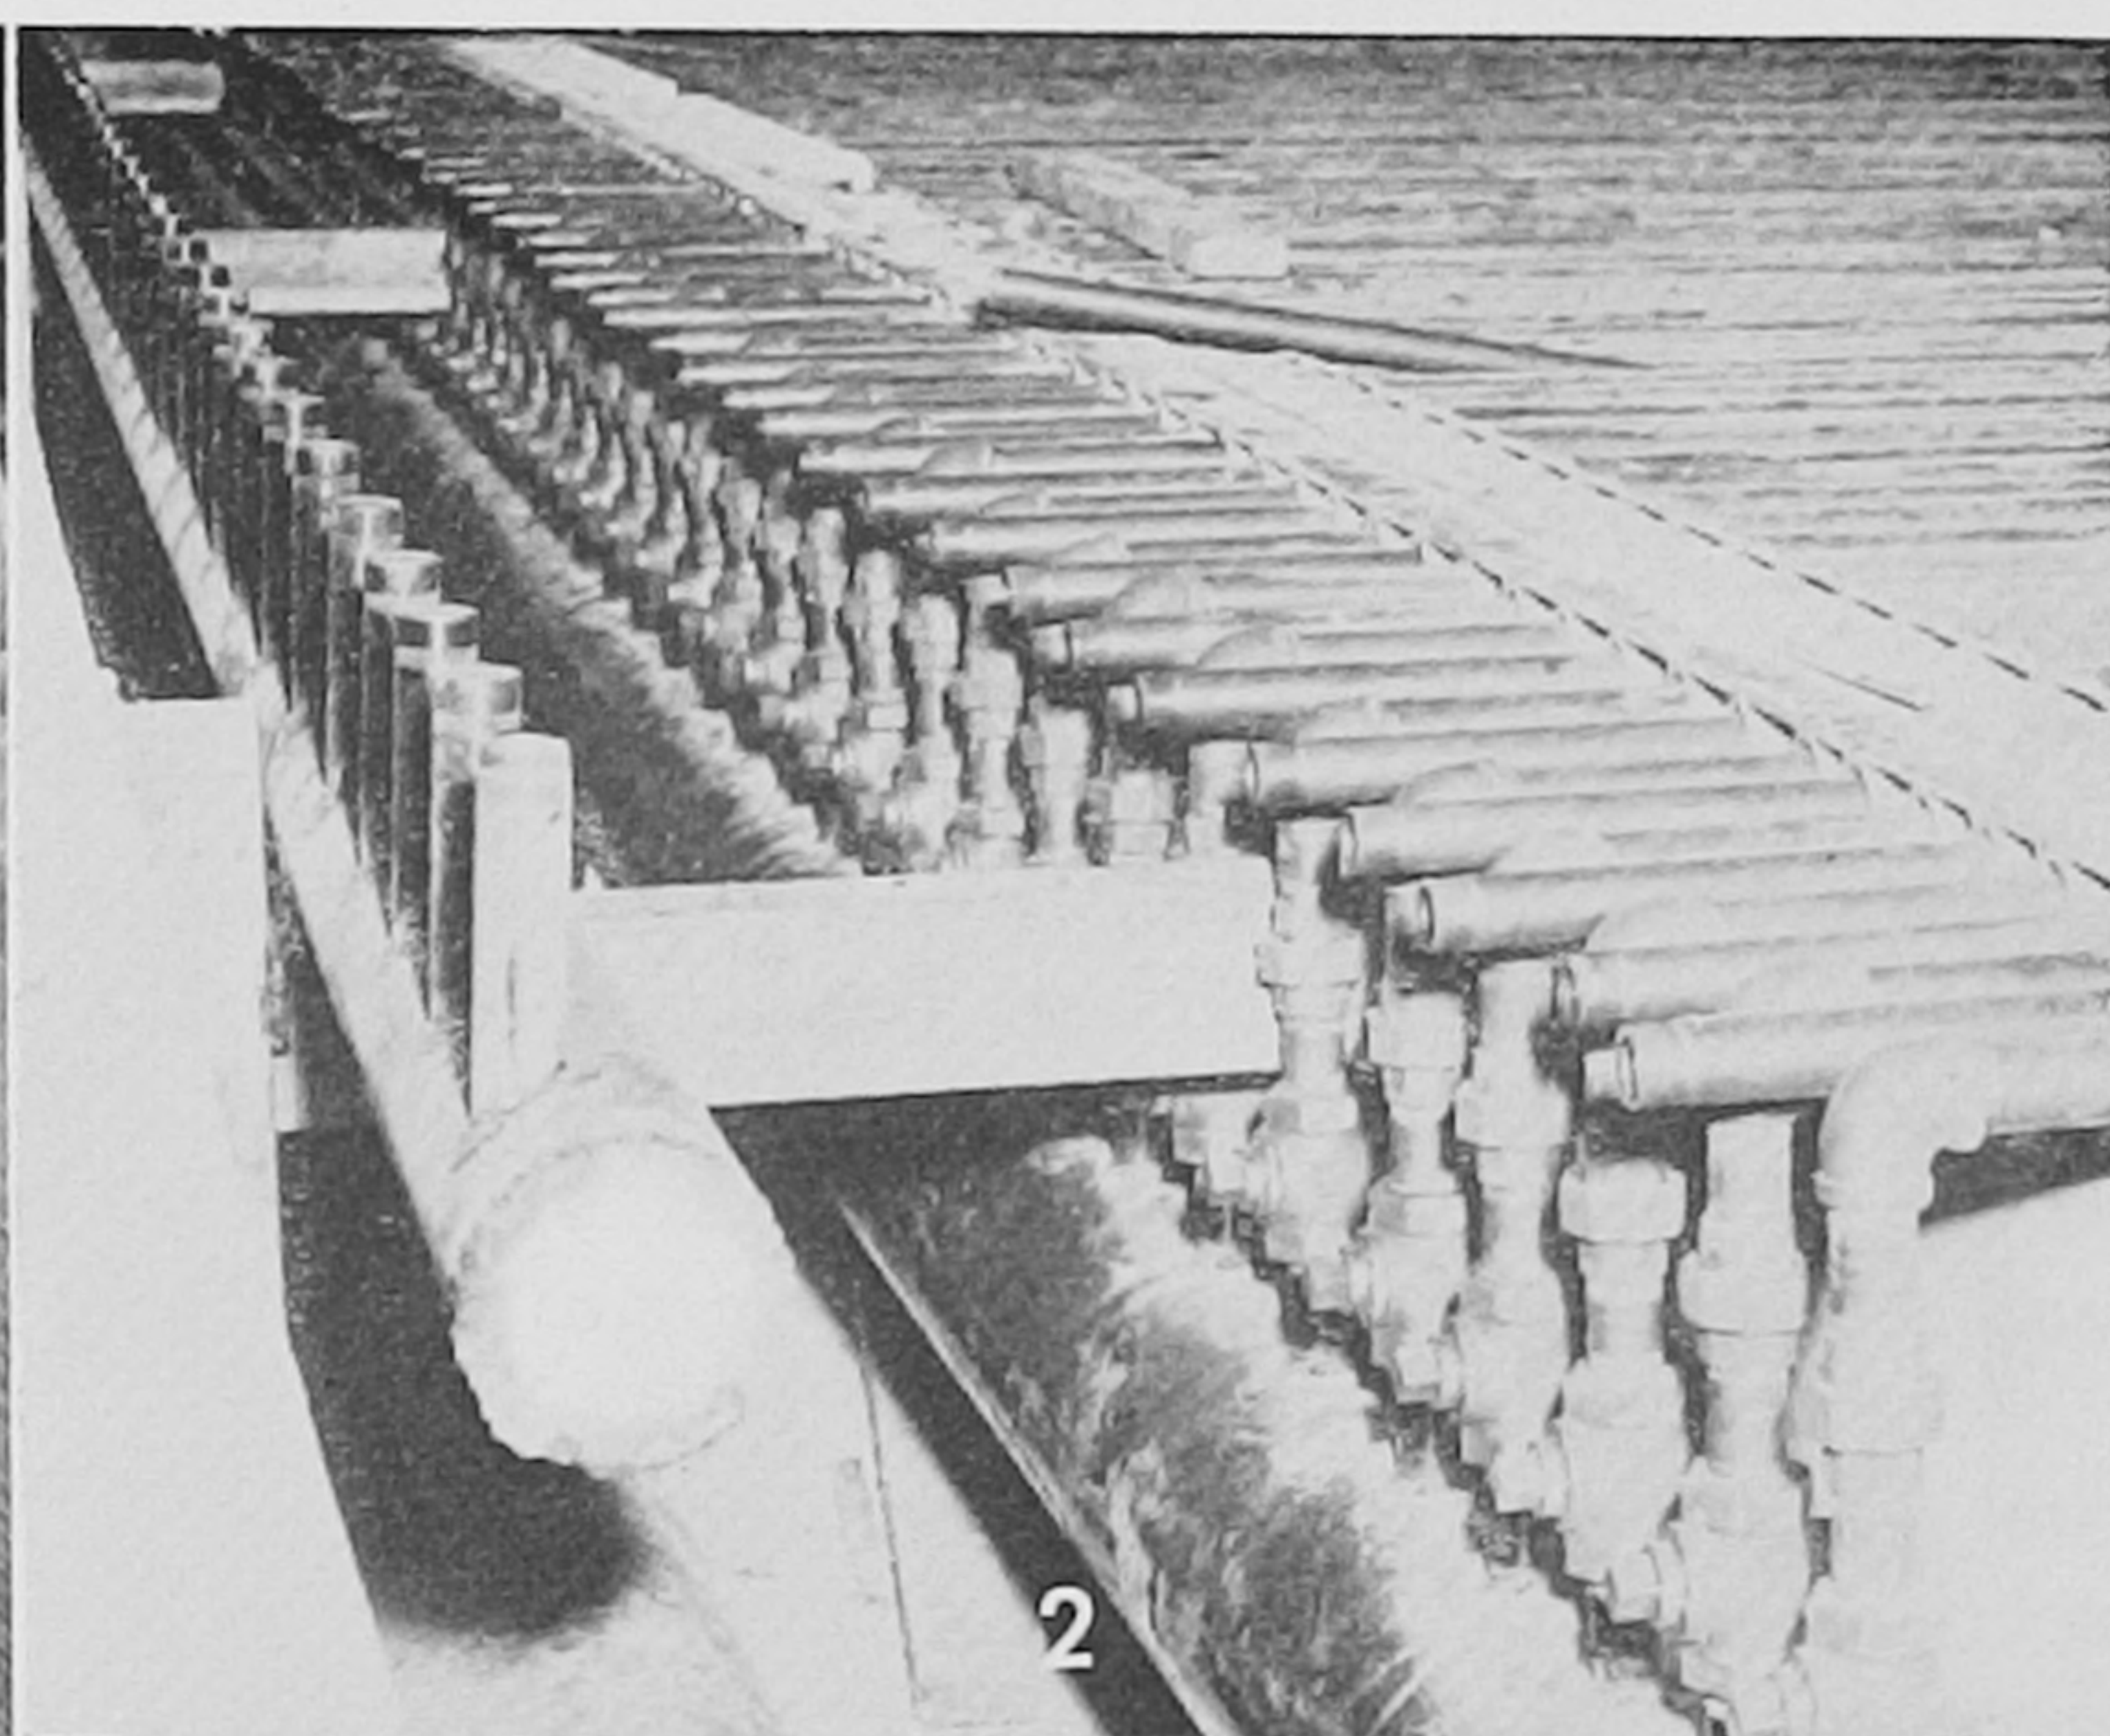

"Middlebury's intercollegiate competition program includes several sports. . . . Vigorous and colorful as intercollegiate competition is, it plays but a minor part in the total program of physical education and recreation at Middlebury.

"In addition to an intercollegiate competition program, the College has an intramural program embracing several sports and providing the experience of team play for all students which is of value throughout life, because it is a lesson in voluntary cooperation which is the heart of democracy.

"Sports, of course, represent only one part of the energetic life which Middlebury students pursue outside the classroom. The College's concern in the area of extra-curricular activities is three-fold: (1) to see that there is a range of activities wide enough to meet all interests; (2) to see that the advantages are open to all; (3) to see that a large degree of student responsibility is established."

BUILDING NEEDS—"Middlebury is faced with the following building needs: (1) A building to be utilized as a Center for dramatics, speech, debating, Little Theatre, and audio work in the languages; (2) a new women's dormitory; (3) wings to Egbert Starr Library; and (4) improved facilities for the Physical Sciences. In arriving at this program of building needs, the College has included only such construction or alteration as will either effect economics or produce maximum improvement upon unsatisfactory conditions.

"Middlebury realizes that people are more important than buildings and the core of the College is found in able faculty members working with students of promise and ability. However, care must be taken to call attention to the importance of Middlebury's building needs. Just as every businessman knows the necessity for efficient plant and equipment, so do Middlebury's alumni and friends realize the important role the College buildings play in influencing the job which can be done. Buildings dedicated to the education of youth serve a purpose beyond utility: they speak of the dignity of learning and of the greatness of human spirit. And in the United States they, more than almost any other structures, symbolize the democratic hope and its accomplishments." [Continued on page 4]

Installation of Artificial Ice Rink Completed in Memorial Field House

Middlebury College's new artificial ice rink was opened recently in the Memorial Field House and official dedication ceremonies are scheduled to take place during the Winter Carnival Week End, Feb. 17-19.

The artificial ice rink, made possible by a gift of $50,000 to the College by Mrs. Charles Baker Wright before her recent death, provides Middlebury students with a full program of recreational skating. Since the Field House was constructed in 1949, the formation of ice has depended upon freezing weather. Often during the past few years, the milder winters have prevented the College from providing the type of program it desired for its students.

The ice making machinery is housed in an addition constructed in the rear of the Field House adjacent to the Reserve Officers Training Corps quarters. The addition also provides space for the students where they may change their skates and shoes.

The entire floor of the Field House was raised five inches and the rink area, 185 by 85 feet, is covered with 2½ inches of foam-glass insulation, a concrete building course and asphalt topping. The College has provided for treating the complete floor of the Field House in such a way as to allow its use for tennis, ROTC drills, and other activities, when the ice rink is not in use.

The outline of the Field House has been altered by the installation of a compressor of the "multi-cylinder type" on the rear roof. The compressor is five feet square and eight feet high is similar to the one in use at the Harvard rink in Cambridge, Mass.

GLIMPSES OF ARTIFICIAL ICE RINK—1. It took more than 50,000 feet of one-inch pipe in the construction of the rink. 2. This picture taken during the construction work shows an incomplete view of the mains through which brine is fed from the machine room into the rink piping. Brine is pumped back for re-chilling. 3. A layer of concrete was poured under the pipes. NEED FOR MORE ENDOWMENT—"An indication of Middlebury's devotion to prudent management is the College's determination to operate on a balanced budget, which has been achieved in each of the past ten years. The College in balancing her budget exercises Vermont frugality in bringing Middlebury's expenditures within the limits of the income available each year.

"During the past twenty-five years the cost of educating a student has greatly increased. Colleges of the nation are today facing the realization that there is a limit to which increasing expenses of a college can be financed by increased tuition.

"Some of Middlebury's friends have said, 'wouldn't it be good business to raise tuition enough to cover these increased costs?'

"As a matter of fact, tuition at Middlebury College is now 100 per cent higher than it was fifteen years ago. Further increases would mean that a Middlebury education would be completely out of the reach of the many able students with limited financial resources. And these young people are the type of students Middlebury seeks as they are among our country's most valuable assets.

"The income of the College from endowment or invested funds has not kept pace with the increasing demands made upon it. This is true despite the fact that over the years Middlebury's endowment and rate of return upon it have steadily increased. For this reason the College promotes the growth of her endowment."

COLLEGE SNOW BOWL is a busy place these winter days as the new POMA SKI LIFT gets steady use. 1. Henry O. McFarland, '56, arrives on the top of slope. 2. Ralph Myhre, Snow Bowl Manager, assists Norman L. Cummings, '57, as he prepares to take the POMA LIFT to the top of the ski run. 3. Marjorie Van Leuvan, '55, all set for a comfortable ride of 3000 feet on the new lift. 4, 5, 7 general views of the POMA LIFT in use. 6. Mr. Myhre and three members of the ski patrol. Annual Alumni Fund Goal Approaches Halfway Mark

As the NEWS LETTER goes to press on January 18th, Walter E. Brooker, '37, and Mildred Becker Bennett, '41, Co-Chairmen, report that 1553 Alumni and Alumnae have contributed a total of $20,648.60. These figures compare favorably to the previous year of the Fund when 1173 Alumni and Alumnae had contributed the sum of $14,403.32 by January 18th.

Chairman Brooker appeals to Alumni and Alumnae to send in contributions as soon as possible as contributions are urgently needed to reach a goal of $50,000 and help the Fund show a record of 50% participation this year. I am taking the liberty, he said, of repeating part of a statement Mrs. Bennett and I made in the last issue of the NEWS LETTER as it has a very important bearing on the success of the College's Development Program. Here is the statement:

It is particularly important that we strengthen our percentage of alumni giving as Middlebury embarks on its $3,000,000 Development Program. This program must be successful if Middlebury is to have the means of increasing faculty salaries, improving its science facilities, enlarging Starr Library and building the much needed Dramatics and Speech Center. The Development Program cannot succeed unless Middlebury Alumni stand up to be counted in support of their college.

Raising $3,000,000 means seeking substantial gifts from outside sources such as foundations, corporations and estates. These sources are constantly faced with requests from private colleges seeking gifts to help them meet pressing needs. A major test of each request is always the question:—"What are your Alumni doing?"

The answer to this question lies with us. If we can show over 50% alumni participation in our Alumni Fund we can give a satisfactory answer to this key question—and we can meet our goal of $50,000. If we fail to rally in support of our College we cannot expect outside sources to support us. We won't fail because Middlebury men and women will not let the College down.

During the months of February and March Area Chairmen are putting on the first "doorbell ringing campaign" for Alumni Fund contributions.

Modern Ski Lift Installed in Bowl

Middlebury now has the best college skiing facilities of any college or any university in the United States. This statement was made possible by the installation of a new, modern-design POMA SKI LIFT at the College's Snow Bowl.

Although there are about 150 Poma lifts in operation in nine countries, there are now only three in the United States. The POMA LIFT, manufactured in France, is very popular in Europe and there are 112 in use in France alone.

The cost of the ski lift is being defrayed from funds restricted for the improvement of the area under the terms of Joseph Battell's will. Dr. Stewart Ross, '20, a long-time benefactor of skiing facilities at Middlebury contributed $2000 towards the cost of a ski lift.

The new lift starts at the left of the present tow house and extends for 3,000 feet to the top of Worth Mountain near the downhill trail. The lift has a vertical of 750 feet with a capacity of about 920 persons per hour, it has a speed of up to 15 feet per second. Middlebury is now the first college in the country to have its own professional type ski lift.

The lift will be dedicated during Winter Carnival Feb. 17-19.

JAMES R. AKERS, '40

The appointment of James R. Akers, '40, as Editor of Automotive Retailer, the national business paper for auto accessory store operators, was announced recently by Herbert F. Ohmeis, Publisher.

Mr. Akers joined Automotive Retailer in 1946 after his discharge from the United States Navy, at the close of World War II. He has been Editorial Assistant, Associate Editor and, since October, 1948, Managing Editor. Before the war he was with McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., New York.

JOHN V. LOWMAN, '52

Lieut. John V. Lowman, '52, U.S. Air Force, was a navigator aboard a C-124 Globemaster which ferried the French paratroopers to Indo-China in an attempt to save Dien Bien Phu. After the Dien Bien Phu mission, Lieut. Lowman was a member of a team which flew relief to flood victims in Pakistan. Last spring he was with the 62nd Troop Carrier Wing when it flew a tactical troop carrier formation north of the Arctic Circle. At present Lieut. Lowman is stationed at the Larsen Air Force Base in Washington. During January he was in Alaska participating in air support maneuvers with the U.S. Army.

JAMES P. BROWN, Jr., '43

James P. Brown, Jr., has been awarded a $5000 fellowship grant by the Reid Foundation for study abroad during 1955. Mr. Brown is one of six journalists to receive fellowship honors made possible by the late Ogden Reid, Editor of the New York Herald Tribune.

Qualifications for the grants are "proved ability" in daily editorial work over a period of five years and determination to make journalism an enduring career. Mr. Brown is News Editor of the New London (Conn.) Day. He was a reporter for the Wilmington (Del.) Evening News and the New Haven (Conn.) Journal-Courier before joining the New London Day. His interest is in India. Mr. Brown believes that India may hold the key to the outcome of the struggle between East and West and he will study that probability in India through 1955.

JOHN E. HANCOCK, '27

Representative John E. Hancock, '27, has been elected Speaker of the Vermont House of Representatives. He was a member of the Vermont House in 1933, 1951 and 1953 and of the Senate in 1939. He is vice president of Northern Farms Cooperative.

Editor's note:—The NEWS LETTER thanks Mrs. William (Evelyn Gardner, '47) Dodd for calling to our attention the following article about Mrs. Donald (Louise Gerlitz, '48) Ebner appearing in a recent issue of Ward-Wide News, publication of the Ward Trucking Corp., Altoona, Pa.

Louise Ebner, daughter of Ward's North Bergen Terminal Manager August Gerlitz, can thank a siege of polio . . . for being one of the most popular teachers at Woodrow Wilson Junior High school, Weehawken, N. J.

Before her attack she planned to study medicine, but her long recuperation forced a change in her plans.

Louise's story was told recently in the feature section of the New York Daily News. Here's the way the News told it:

Louise, an English and history teacher in the seventh, eighth and ninth grades, takes a special interest in the personal problems of her students. Invariably, sourpusses emerge from her class all smiles and Louise attributes it partly to the fact that she's light on homework.

LOUISE GERLITZ EBNER, '48

"Too much outside work is really not necessary if everything is covered properly in class," she said. "The student should have more time for extra-curricular and social activities. That's as important as school work."

Louise lives at 321 Seventy-eighth street, North Bergen, with her husband, Donald, a salesman. She graduated from Memorial High school, West New York, where she was a member of the school's first majorette squad.

After graduating she was a medical stenographer at Cornell Medical college and until 1944 she felt it would be her life's work. That year she was felled with polio and the long recuperation made the study of medicine almost impossible.

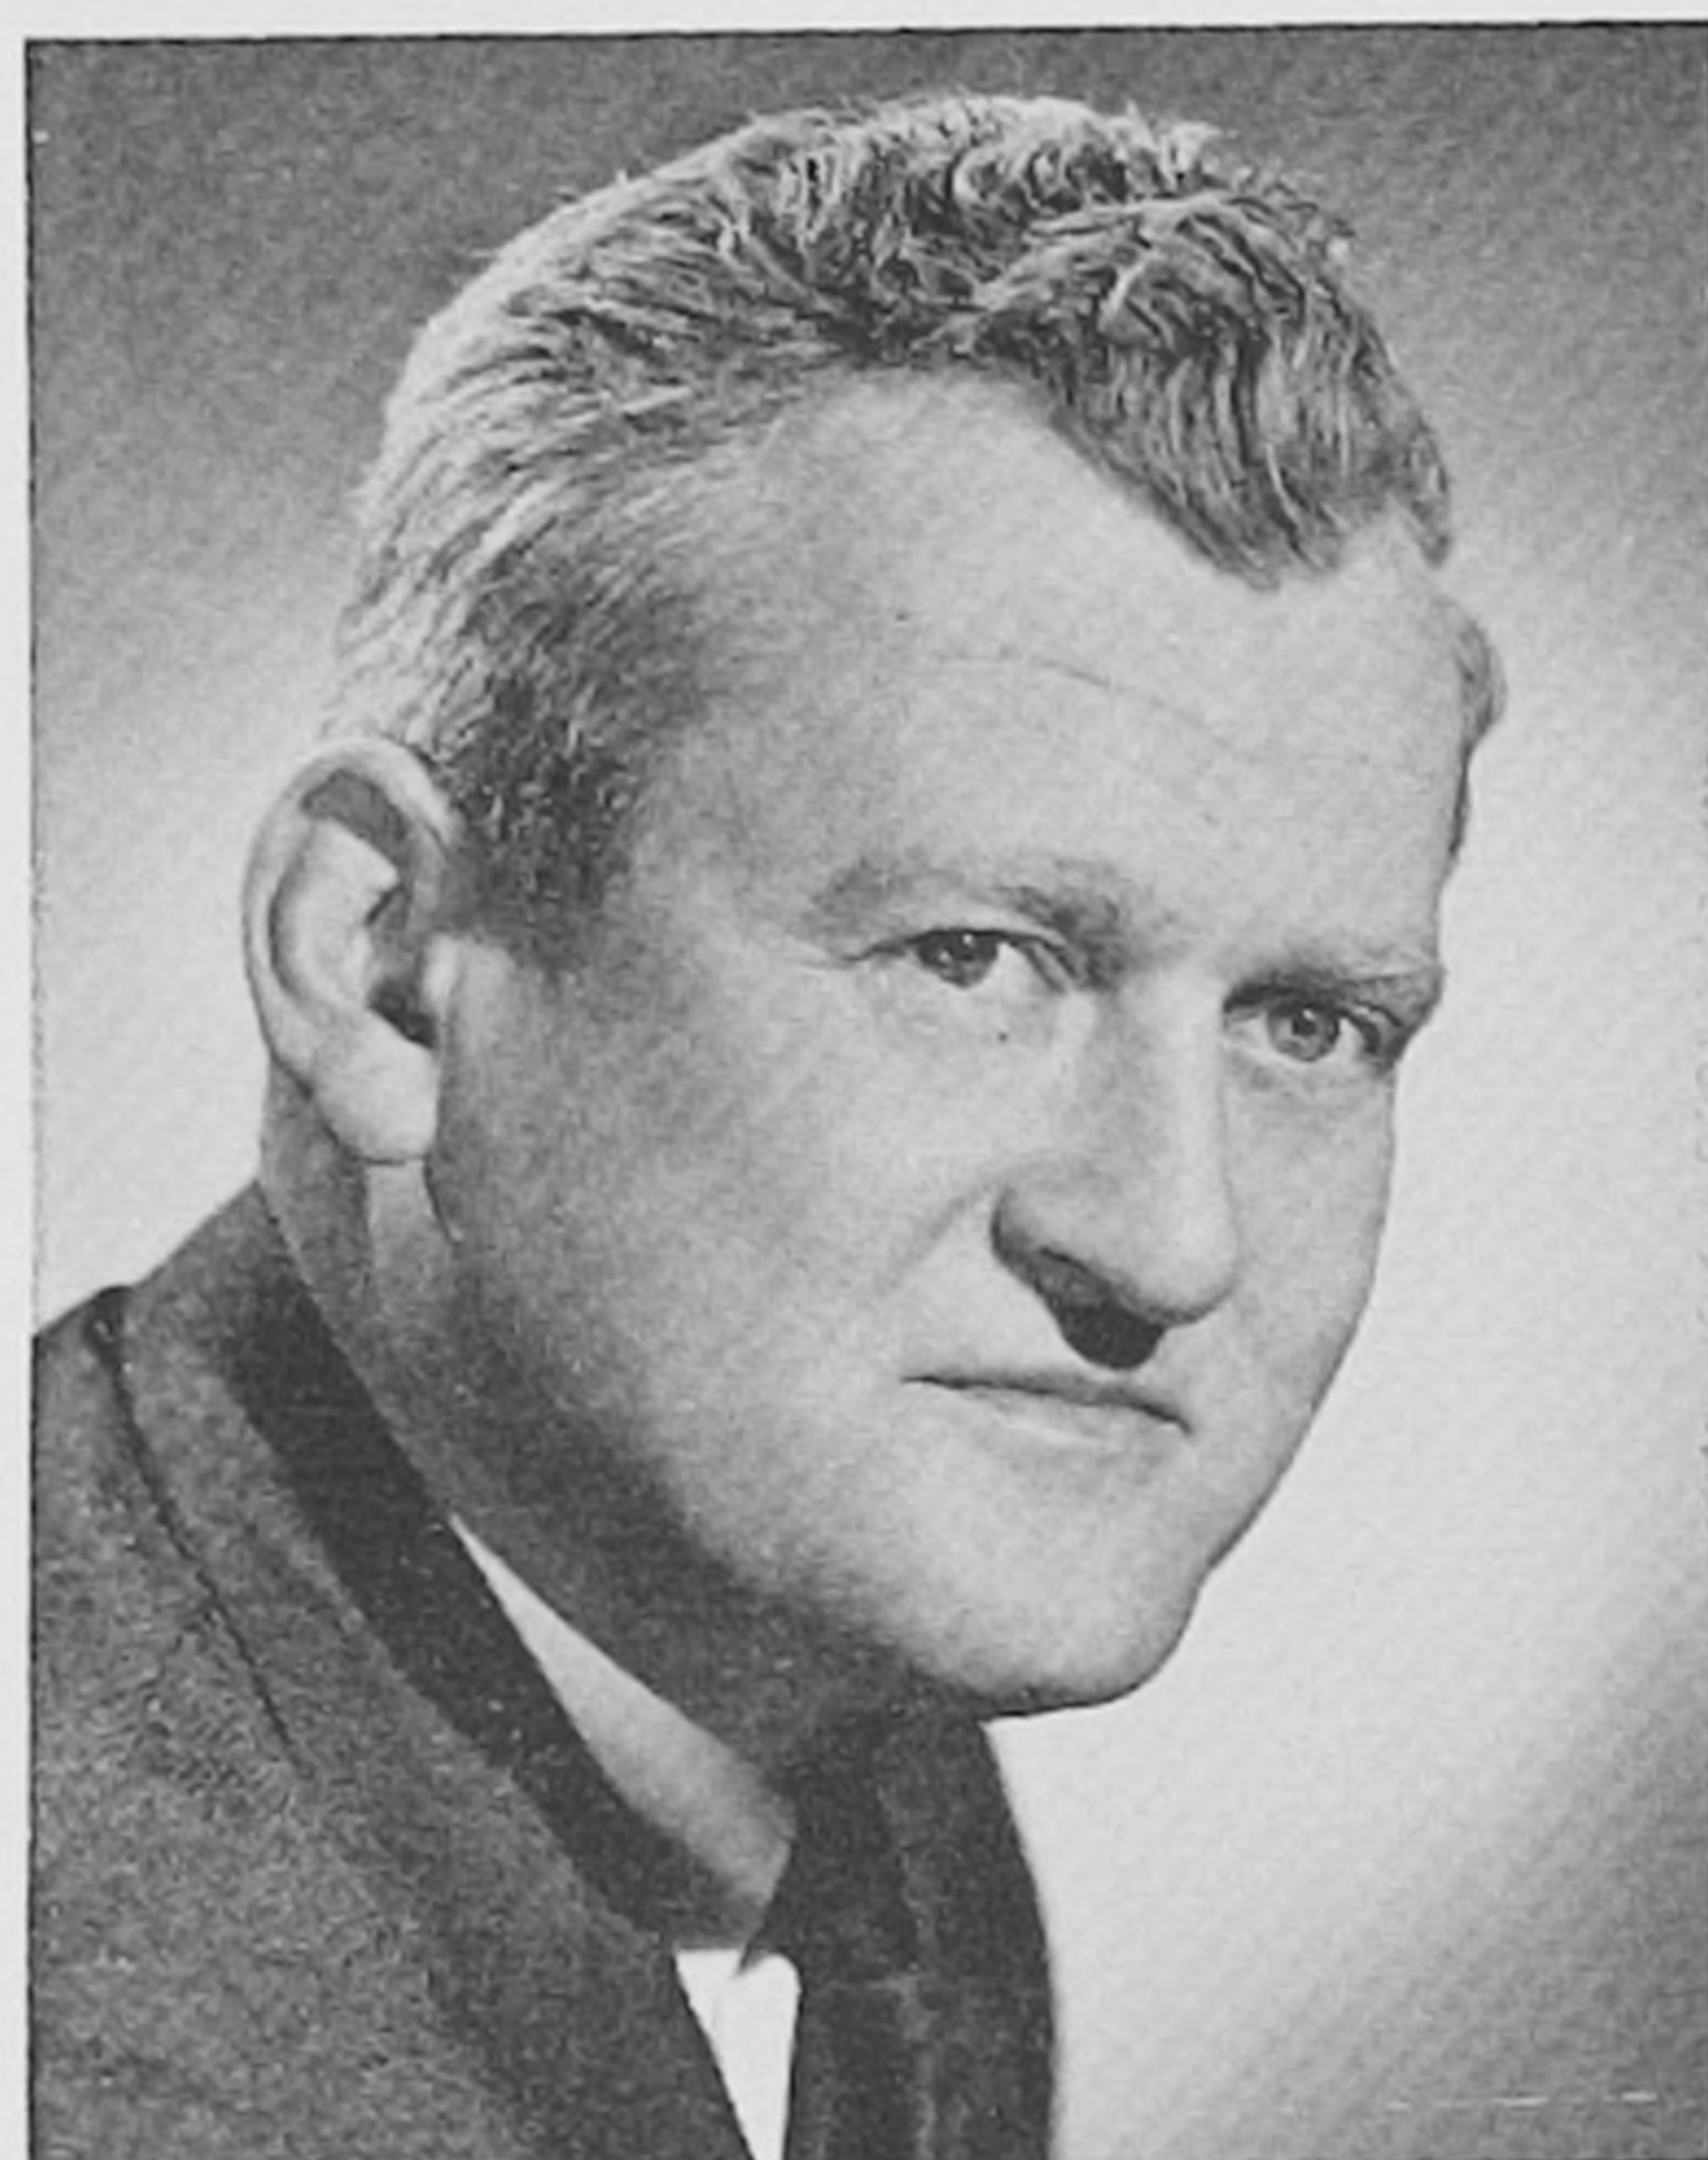

A year later she realized her future lay in teaching and went to Middlebury College, Vermont. At the Weehawken school, Louise heads the hospitality club. She is also superintendent of the United Presbyterian Church Sunday school in West New York and leads the junior choir. She plays the French horn in a Brooklyn church band. Her husband, a trombonist, is also a member.

HAMILTON SHEA, '36

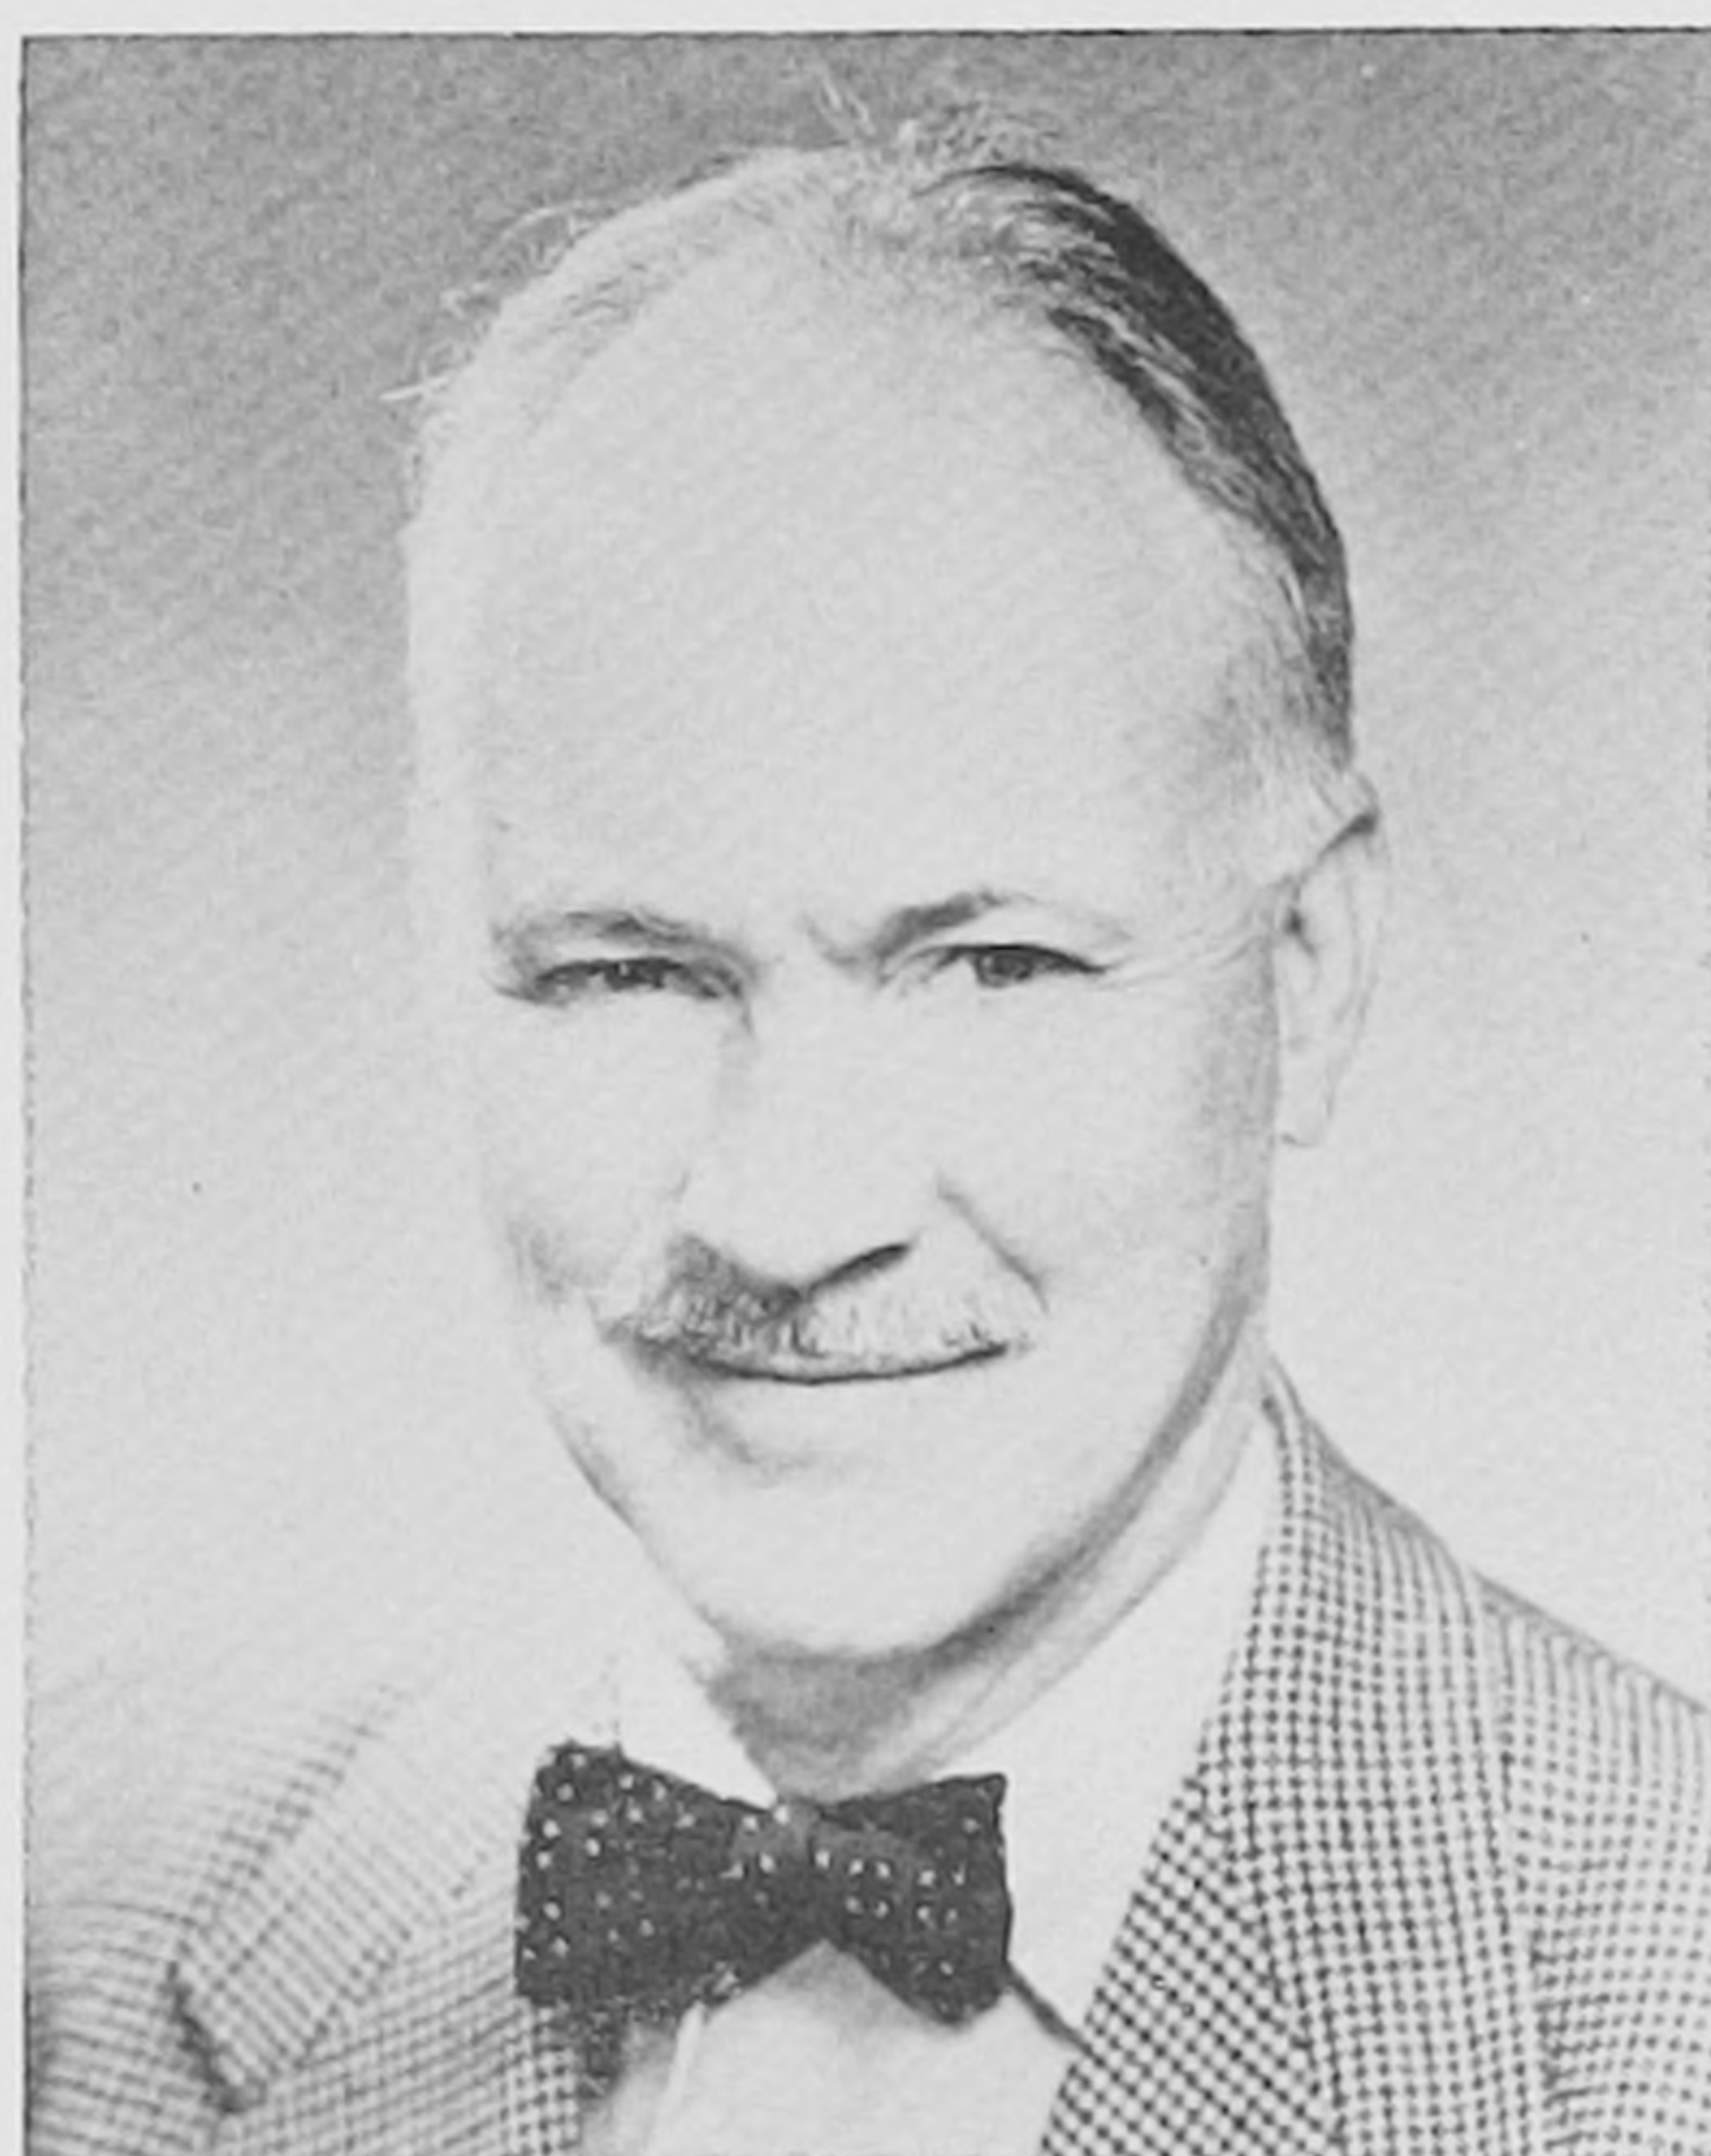

Hamilton Shea, '36, has been elected Vice President of WRCA and WRCA-TV, National Broadcasting Company radio and television stations in New York. Announcement of Mr. Shea's election was made by Sylvester L. Weaver, Jr., President of NBC.

Mr. Shea has been General Manager of WRCA and WRCA-TV since July, 1953. Before that he was General Manager of the NBC stations in Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Shea joined NBC in 1949 as controller of NBC's Owned and Operated Stations Division. He was named Director of Operations for the division in 1951 and a year later was transferred to Cleveland to head the NBC stations there.

Before joining NBC, he served five years as Treasurer and Controller of the Emerson Drug Company. His background also includes two years with the Chase National Bank and six years with the Tel-autograph Corporation.

He is a member of Delta Upsilon Fraternity, the Controllers Institute of America, the Radio and Television Executives Society, the University Club in New York, and the Whippoorwill Golf Club, Armonk, N. Y.

Mr. Shea lives at 14 Ludlow Drive, Chappaqua, with his wife and four daughters.

JOHN M. MYERS, '28

John Myers Myers, '28, is the author of the novel DOC HOLLIDAY published on January 24th. This book is a biography of one of the West's most colorful heroes, in his book Mr. Myers writes: "From the point of view of research I have dug up much that was either not generally known at all, or had been long forgotten. I have exhumed for example the final and highly dramatic episode of the Tombstone feud from where it has lain buried in old newspaper files since 1882. . . . I think I have accurately demonstrated how an unusual man worked out a difficult destiny."

Listed among other novels by Mr. Myers, are, THE HARP AND THE BLADE, OUT ON ANY LIMB, THE WILD YAZOO, and SILVERLOCK. His non-fiction includes a history of the Alamo and a history of Tombstone, Arizona, called THE LAST CHANCE, published in 1950. Mr. Myers has also been a newspaperman, an advertising copywriter, a farmer, lecturer, political analyst. He has travelled extensively in "quite a few European countries, including some now behind the Iron Curtain."

Mr. Myers lives in Tempe, Arizona, where he is gathering an Americana collection for the Ariz. State Teachers' Coll.

RAY SACHER, '47

Ray Sacher, '47, is the new Secretary-Treasurer of the Music Industry Council, an auxiliary of the Music Educators National Conference. The Music Industry Council serves as the Department of Music of the National Education Association and is among the leading professional organizations in the field of education.

The Music Industry Council includes in its membership practically all of the publishers, manufacturers, and suppliers of music, instruments, equipment, and the various materials used in teaching music in the schools.

The Radio Corporation of America of Camden, New Jersey, with which Mr. Sacher is connected, is one of the long-standing members of the Music Industry Council. His work at RCA is in the position of assistant to the manager of RCA Educational Services, and he is responsible for the coordination of promotional and institutional activities with the audiovisual markets.

One of the principal functions of the Music Industry Council is to provide displays representing products of the various firms at the conventions of the Music Educators National Conference. These displays are widely known for their effectiveness.

FACULTY

By Professor John G. Bowker, Dean of the Faculty

CRITICAL housing shortages are usually associated with urban and large industrial centers, but beginning about 1948 the situation in Middlebury grew progressively worse and reached an embarrassing stage in 1952. Houses for new faculty simply were not available. Middlebury has no suburbs from which to commute. The advent of our Reserve Officers Training Corps unit further aggravated the tight housing situation and the Trustees of the College were obliged to purchase several homes at inflated prices.

For a number of years the College had made available, to a limited number (29) of Faculty, houses and apartments which it owned and the rental charges had been lower than the rates prevailing in the village. The cost of the newly acquired properties was such that to realize an income of but 2% on the monies invested rental charges were fixed in excess of what many of the Faculty could afford. Immediately, inequities were so apparent that an independent appraisal of all college-owned houses was made, for the Trustees had been aware that their entire housing operation had shown a deficit for some years. On December 11, 1952, Acting President Stephen A. Freeman (Dr. Stratton was in Saudi Arabia at the time on a Government assignment) notified the Faculty that a new schedule of rental charges would go into effect on July 1, 1953, and that even though he regretted that some increases would amount to between 30% and 40%, the College would realize even then a return of only 2% on book value and 1.1% on the appraised market value of the properties concerned.

With clear understanding and in anticipation of the problem which was being created for a number of Faculty families, Dr. Freeman had appointed a faculty committee on housing the previous summer. The committee was instructed to study what might be done by the Trustees to enable more of the Faculty to buy or build homes. We were told that the Trustees would prefer to view the College's function in providing houses for Faculty only as a convenience and a service while the faculty member is on a temporary basis. They expressed a desire to retire from rather than expand into the landlord business. From the Faculty standpoint, an additional source of concern stemmed from the fact that the properties they were renting from the College and others were far from adequate to accommodate their growing families. (At the Cosmos Club Christmas party held in December, gifts were provided for 91 faculty children under the age of ten!)

The committee worked upon the hypothesis that the average faculty member should not spend more than $80 per month for housing. This meant that any feasible amortization plan must call for an appreciably smaller payment so as to allow for taxes and insurance. The committee met with Faculty, individually and in groups, consulted local lending agencies, studied F.H.A. and G.I. Bill plans, and in February of 1953 a proposal was ready for the Trustees. They were represented by Mr. Leon Gay, Chairman of the Buildings and Grounds Committee of the Board, and though he was busy with last minute arrangements to leave for Europe, he gave most willingly of his time and experience so that a working plan could be presented to the full Board that spring.

Mr. Gay came to Middlebury to discuss the problem with the Faculty at an open informal meeting. The faculty committee met with him several times at his home in Brandon and finally just a few days before he sailed for Europe, Mr. Carroll Rikert, College Business Manager, joined the group to work out the operational details. The plan was adopted by the Board of Trustees at their next meeting and went into effect immediately. One faculty member started his new home at once and three others purchased existing properties under the plan within the next few weeks.

The plan requires a member of the Faculty to have on hand 20% of the amount he plans to spend. The College will loan him 7/12ths of the remainder (up to $7000) at a rate of 2% per year on a monthly 20-year amortization basis. The cost is but $5.05 per month for each $1000 borrowed. The unique feature of the plan is that the College holds only a second mortgage on the property making it possible to raise the remaining 5/12ths on a first mortgage at one of the local banks. In other words, the College has provided the Faculty member with a down payment sufficient to make his mortgage readily bankable. The cost of this additional loan is $6.60 per month for each $1000 borrowed, again for 20 years. On a $15,000 house, $12,000 borrowed, the total monthly payment including interest, amortization, and complete insurance coverage up to 80% of valuation, is $70.91. Special veteran's privileges reduce this to $68.21.

When a faculty member builds or buys adjacent to College owned property, the College does reserve re-purchase rights.

In June 1952, seventeen faculty members owned their homes. They had been acquired through purchase and construction over a period of some twenty-five years. Now, two and one-half years later, thirty-four of us own our homes in and around Middlebury and fourteen have been financed under the faculty housing plan. The Trustees have invested $100,000 in the fund and it is hoped and expected that repayments on principal will provide the necessary demands of future [Continued on page 12]

"ANCIENT Religion and a Modern World: Are They Compatible?" was the topic of the Second Annual Middlebury College Religious Conference. Students and townspeople filled Mead Memorial Chapel, Dec. 2-4, to hear the addresses by a Presbyterian minister, a Jewish rabbi and a Catholic layman.

The conference was opened by the Protestant speaker, Dr. Leland Jamison, Chairman of the Religion Department of Macalester College. He said that man stands at an "ambiguous crossroads." Dr. Jamison pointed out that religion is "a sanctuary in time of trouble" whose historical memories of Christ provide man with confidence for the future. He warned against expecting an absolute answer from "finite, sinful, and mortal answerers," and advised his audience to strive to be "chastened, enlightened, and energized men and women" through "work, renunciation, and trust in the mercy of God."

Rabbi Maurice Zigmond, President of the Eastern New England Conference of Liberal Rabbis, called attention to the fact that Judaism is twice as ancient as Christianity. He affirmed its compatibility with the present by means of several illustrative concepts: The Jewish interest in learning, the essential idea of monotheism, the lack of dogmatism, and the responsibility to the individual for his own faith and behavior.

Sir Arnold Lunn, author, mountaineer, and Catholic convert, spoke for his adopted faith by outlining the reasons for his own conversion. He explained that the church was not to adapt itself to the world, but the world to the church. He revealed that he had been attracted to Catholicism by its positive assertion of the revelation of God through Christ, its militancy, which provided discipline and leadership, the tolerance of its clergy, its artistic heritage, and its history of consistent rightness. In conclusion he stated that "the church is ever old, ever new."

Each of the three speeches was followed by a panel question period which later broke up into individual discussion groups led by the speakers. The principal topic of the first session was the existence of God, of the second, the resurrection, and of the third, papal infallibility and the superiority of the Roman Catholic church.

When the new Battell Center women's dormitory opens in February it will boast of a coin operated automatic washing machine and a dryer installed in the new dormitory in the interest of service and convenience. The machines, located in a separate room in the basement of the middle Battell, will be accessible to occupants of Battell North and Battell South.

Proceeds of the coin operation will be used to meet operating expenses, keep the machines in repair and replace them when they wear out or to buy additional machines.

If the experiment in the operation of the machines is successful in the Battells, the College will consider installing similar machines in other appropriate locations in both men's and women's dormitories.

A total of 166 pints of blood was donated at the fall Middlebury Blood Drive. The College exceeded its original quota of 135 pints.

The total included approximately 63 pints given by the women and 103 pints given by the men from 175 walk-in donors. Of these contributors two students, Robert Gleason '54 and Burton Emory '57 have now become gallon donors.

New social rules concerning hours for women were passed at the January 5th meeting of the Women's Undergraduate Association.

Under the new rules which were put into effect with the second semester, seniors have 11 o'clock permissions on Friday or Sunday night, five other 11 o'clock late permissions for the first semester, and 11 o'clock permissions every night second semester. Juniors have 11 o'clock permissions on Friday or

Sunday night and three other 11 o'clock late permissions per semester. Sophomores have five 11 o'clocks and freshmen will have three 11 o'clocks per semester. All women have 11 o'clock permissions when returning to Middlebury by car. Two 10:30 permissions will equal one 11 o'clock permission.

The Women's Undergraduate Association also voted that petitions would no longer be necessary for electing its assembly representatives and that each house president could handle the choice of representatives within her dormitory in whatever way she might choose. However, one-third of the dormitory representatives from first semester to avoid orientating an entire new group of members. The four class presidents which form an advisory council for the president will also be asked to join the assembly.

With the start of mid-year examinations, the various sports teams took a short vacation and resumed their schedules at the end of January.

After a slow start this year, the basketball team soon showed improvement. Middlebury played good basketball in the New England College Tournament at Storrs, Connecticut, during the Christmas vacation period. The Panthers won over previously undefeated Amherst and then lost, 75-69, to Dartmouth, the eventual tournament winner, and dropped another game, 74-69, to Brown. Back in Middlebury, after the Christmas holidays, the Panthers won three out of four games before the close of the first semester. Middlebury won over Vermont and Norwich before losing a 70-69 game to St. Michael's College. Middlebury center Tom Hart set a new college record in the Vermont game as he scored 36 points.

Coach "Duke" Nelson's hockey team had a record at mid-year of five wins and two losses. Before Christmas, the Panthers lost to Tufts and then defeated Boston University 5-4 in overtime period.

After Christmas the Middlebury hockey team edged Dartmouth for a victory 4-3, for the first Middlebury win at Hanover within recent memory. The Panthers also defeated Williams 6-0.

Middlebury's 1955 football schedule calls for seven games. The schedule: Sept. 24, Wesleyan at Middletown, Conn.; Oct. 1, Colby at Waterville, Me.; Oct. 8, Williams at Middlebury; Oct. 15, Bates at Middlebury; Oct. 22, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N.Y.; Oct. 29, Norwich at Northfield, and Nov. 5, University of Vermont at Middlebury.

borrowers. Middlebury College loses about half its normal income on the $100,000, but the Trustees and Administration of the College are relieved of a thorny problem. There is solace in the realization that when we seek the services of new Faculty we can give greater assurance that adequate housing is available.

An interesting revelation is demonstrated in some of the accompanying photographs. Many faculty members have proven to be expert craftsmen. The Faculty have helped each other and paid and repaid for services in clock hours. They have shown to be amazingly able masons, carpenters, plumbers, and electricians. Eleven men turned out last June to help with the pouring of a cement foundation wall. A couple of wives served as tampers. The wall measured some 70 by 35 feet and to the astonishment of the local contractor, Bill Reynolds, it was all poured in the matter of a few hours. He had warned that with a 5 a.m. start they might finish before dark. As further evidence of the fine spirit with which they worked, I am told that the checks the owner gave to each were never cashed.

Many of the Faculty have beautiful homes, custom designed to their immediate and expected future needs. The savings on labor costs have helped to make them quality homes at a modest cost. We appreciate the interest and assistance of Bill Reynolds. His concern has secured the structural soundness of several Faculty houses.

The prompt consideration and effective solution of the problem by the Faculty committee, Mr. Gay, and the Board of Trustees is greatly appreciated by all members of our Faculty.

Chemistry at Middlebury College

By DR. GRANT H. HARNEST, Chairman of the Chemistry Department

AN ARTICLE on Chemistry at Middlebury College can not be properly written without first paying tribute to Professor Perley Conant Voter who labored to bring the Department to its present high national standing. Although Chemistry has been a part of the curriculum at Middlebury since 1816, it was during Professor Voter's forty years of service that it was developed into a strong vigorous department.

As many Alumni and Alumnae will recall, "Vote" came to Middlebury in 1913 just at the time of construction of the present Chemistry Building and he gave Professor McGilton invaluable assistance in supervising many construction details.

Professor Voter was raised to the rank of professor and made chairman of the Department in 1919, just six years after coming to Middlebury. It was under "Vote's" guiding hand that the Department was developed to the point where it was recognized nationally by the American Chemical Society in 1942. His greatest interest was in his students and as Miss Phyllis Mercaldi, '53, wrote in her tribute in the 1954 year's Kaleidoscope, "he guided them with a gentle hand and taught them with sympathetic encouragement. . . . We, the students of Middlebury College, shall never forget our beloved teacher and friend. His memory will always serve to strengthen our search for the good and our achievement of the best."

Surprising to many is the fact that Chemistry as a separate subject dates back to 1816, when the Board of Trustees established a Professorship of Chemistry and appointed the Reverend Gamaliel S. Olds to go to Yale to "prepare himself" to teach Chemistry. Mr. Olds indeed did go to Yale and studied under famed Professor Silliman, but he never did return to Middlebury because of "insufficient funds in the treasury." In those days even the President's salary was in arrears. For the next several years the early catalogues show that one of the five or six faculty members was always a Lecturer in Chemistry and in 1828 the Professorship was filled with the appointment of a Reverend Fowler to the post. At this time chemical apparatus was imported from London for Reverend Fowler and the use of his students. It is interesting to note that the first chemistry laboratories at Middlebury were located in Old Chapel.

In studying the history of the Chemistry Department, it has been surprising also to learn that today's basic Chemistry curriculum is very similar to that of fifty years ago. The four principal areas of study today, Inorganic, Organic, Analytical and Physical Chemistry also constituted the basic curriculum at the turn of this century. Specialized courses such as Clinical Chemistry during the last war and Industrial Chemistry in the early thirties, were introduced to meet demands of the times but they were short lived. The one major permanent addition to the curriculum in the last twenty years has been Biochemistry, a subject which becomes increasingly important with the passing of each year. Middlebury was one of the first small colleges to offer this field of study at the undergraduate level.

The Chemistry Department of today functions in three capacities; (1) training majors in its own right; (2) as a service department to Biology, Physics and Geology; and finally but certainly not of the least importance, (3) it provides courses in Chemistry for the non-science major as a part of his liberal arts education. Although the number of majors in the department since the end of World War II until this year has been small (from five to nine), they have been for the most part excellent students and about 50% of them have continued study at the graduate level. The trend to lower numbers of science majors in recent years is not peculiar to Middlebury. It has been national in scope and has reached the point where it is considered almost catastrophic by some defense authorities. However, the author is happy to report that at Middlebury at least the trend seems to be upward for there are seventeen majors in this year's senior class, nine in the junior class, and nineteen in the sophomore class as of this writing.

In 1953 the Chemistry Department introduced a new major somewhat less rigorous in character than our regular accredited major. Need for such a major came about in two ways. In the past ten years a number of students [Continued on page 17] with special objectives in mind had expressed the desire to major in Chemistry but did not feel they needed all of the Chemistry courses and cognates required in our regular major. Since we had just one Chemistry major these students could not be accommodated by the department. Then in the spring of 1952, the faculty reasserted the principle that a Middlebury student should receive as broad an education as possible. To implement this principle it was voted that a student could not count more than forty-two credit hours in any one department towards the 120 hours required for graduation. As a result of this action, the Chemistry Department re-evaluated its course of instruction. By reducing the semester credit hours in elementary Organic Chemistry and Quantitative Analysis from five to four, the total number of hours in Chemistry was reduced from 51 to 47 hours.

A further reduction was effected by requiring Physical Chemistry to fulfill the General Examination requirement bringing the total to 44 hours. This action was entirely logical since Physical Chemistry by its very nature is comprehensive in character. However, we were unable to effect a further reduction without, in our opinion, jeopardizing the major for the student who wished to go to graduate school or enter the chemical industry. This meant that a student majoring in Chemistry had to compile 122 credits to graduate. In view of this and the student pressures mentioned above, a new major was introduced. The new or general major requires work in all basic fields of Chemistry just as the accredited major does, but the total number of hours has been reduced to 40 by requiring only one semester of Physical Chemistry, a special course taught without Calculus as a prerequisite. Only one cognate, one year of college Mathematics, is required. Except for the reduction of credit hours in certain courses, the accredited major remains the same as it has been for the past ten years.

The present staff of the Chemistry Department consists of four men all with Ph.D.'s and one woman with the A.B. degree. Since the staff is young and probably not well known to many of you, it may be of interest to record training highlights.

The author earned his A.B. degree at Knox College in Galesburg, Illinois, and first came to Middlebury as a graduate student in 1939. After completion of the Master's program in 1941, he continued graduate work in Organic Chemistry at the University of Virginia for the Ph.D. and returned to Middlebury in 1943 as a staff member.

Dr. Walter A. Moyer joined the staff in the spring of 1951 after completing work for the Ph.D. in Organic and Biochemistry at the University of Delaware. This is Dr. Moyer's second experience at Middlebury for he too earned the Master's degree here. His undergraduate training was obtained at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science.

Dr. E. Kirk Roberts, our physical chemist, also earned his A.B. degree in a small college, Earlham College in Richmond, Indiana. His graduate work was carried out at Harvard University under famed Dr. Kistiakowsky. Dr. Roberts joined the Middlebury staff in 1952.

Dr. E. L. Pool and Miss Paula Boesch both joined the staff this fall. Dr. Pool came to us from DePauw University where he taught analytical courses last year. He earned both his graduate and undergraduate degrees at Iowa State University where his major interests were in the fields of Analytical and Biochemistry. Dr. Pool is teaching Qualitative Analysis and Advanced Inorganic Chemistry.

Miss Paula Boesch graduated from Middlebury as valedictorian and Magna cum Laude last June. She completed a double major in Chemistry and French. Miss Boesch is teaching Quantitative Analysis and one section of freshmen.

Although the primary interest of the staff is undergraduate instruction, some time is found for research. In recent years problems on or related to pentose chemistry, analgesics, surface areas, and polarography have been investigated. Several years ago grants from the Research Corporation were awarded to two members of the staff to support research activities.

Two years ago Middlebury was one of nineteen small colleges honored by the duPont de Nemours Company with an award to the Chemistry Department for the academic year 1953-54 "in recognition of the outstanding record of your Chemistry Department in the education of chemistry majors, as evidenced in part by the number it has prepared and encouraged to complete their education at the post-graduate level in the Universities." The award was renewed for the current year. This grant has opened the way for the department to purchase special equipment and engage in activities that would otherwise have been impossible. For example, it is now possible for any member of the staff to attend national American Chemical Society or other learned professional meetings. The only representative from the state of Vermont at the Kansas City A.C.S. meeting last spring was a Middlebury staff member. The duPont grant made this possible.

Perhaps the most interesting activity supported by the grant to date was a special research project last summer on unique experiments for the General Chemistry laboratories. We have felt for some time that student interest in and benefit from Chemistry and perhaps science in general could be stimulated considerably by the introduction of unique and challenging experiments in the freshman course. We wanted to get away from the run of the mill type of experiment which may have been conducted by the student in his high school course. Secondly, we wanted to introduce the element of the unknown into as many experiments as possible. It was felt that the student would find his laboratory work a good deal more exciting and instructive if he did not already know the answers or could not readily find them in a textbook. However, the experiments must still teach or demonstrate fundamental principles and truths.

Dr. Moyer and Dr. Roberts, both of whom have been teaching General Chemistry, undertook last summer to develop new or modified experiments for the General laboratory. It was not an easy task and some ideas which on the surface seemed excellent had to be discarded, momentarily at least, because techniques suitable for a first year laboratory course could not be worked out in the limited time available. Perhaps some of these will be developed in the future. Although all ideas did not come to fruition, enough did so that an entirely new freshman laboratory program has been put into operation this fall. In the author's opinion, the program is a marked improvement over the traditional freshman laboratory experience in Chemistry. Practically every experiment has something of the unknown in it. Materials and techniques are in general new, even to the student who has had a superior Chemistry course in high school.

Student response for the most part has been enthusiastic and we hope that the new program will lead to a better

A Middlebury Mystery: Did Ira Allen's Sons Ever Attend Middlebury College?

By DUANE L. ROBINSON, '03

THE VERY EXISTENCE of the State of Vermont is largely due to the far-sightedness, the acumen and the indefatigability of Ira Allen. Although his judgment in regard to purchasing and retaining possession of the land on which the City of Burlington now stands was questioned even by his own brothers, time has shown that no business venture in Vermont real estate was ever made by him with greater shrewdness. He saw the commercial possibilities of a town thus strategically located on Lake Champlain, so near to Canada, when the lake was the only thoroughfare through the wilderness.

He himself, one of a large family of children, had been denied the privilege of anything but the most meager schooling. His determination that his own children and those of the other families that had braved the dangers and hardships of pioneer life in Vermont should have educational advantages not open to him was shown by his offer of a gift of four thousand pounds for the foundation of a state university in Burlington, an offer made at the time when there were only a few log houses on the present site of the city, which was mostly a pine forest, and when Vermont had not yet been admitted to the Union.

The story of the vicissitudes of the University of Vermont, for which a charter was granted in 1781, can not be told here. That story represents the age-old contest between those who have and those who have not. For several years action was blocked in the matter of putting the University into operation by Allen's personal and political enemies and, in the meantime, these enemies, taking advantage of his financial embarrassment and the fact that he was devoting the time that he might have spent on his personal affairs to the service of his state, succeeded in wresting the control of the embryo institution from his hands.

Meanwhile the citizens of Middlebury, who saw no immediate prospect of action in the matter of the University, had applied for and secured a charter for Middlebury College, which began to operate in 1800.

Although the University had been conceived of and made possible by Allen, the fact that it was now under the control of men who were doing their best to ruin him determined its founder to send his sons to Middlebury. The following letter, dated April 11, 1805, written to an old friend who had been largely instrumental in the founding of Middlebury College, explains his intent.

"Gamaliel Painter, Esq. and Lady:

Herewith I commit to your care my two sons, Ira and Zimri, whom I intend shall receive an education at Middlebury College—and while I return my acknowledgements for your Kindness in consenting to take them into your family, I hope that you will not consider them as mere boarders, but as under your immediate care and protection subject to your commands, and particularly that they be enjoined to pay strict attention to their studies, that they be refrained from keeping bad company, from being out late nights and such other vices as boys of their ages are likely to fall into, that they attend public worship and all other regulations thought best—I have enjoined all this upon them myself and prepared their minds for the reception of any advice from you—Ira is attentive to his books. Zimri's disposition I esteem to be equally good and who is a boy of genius, but for some cause or other, he has not the relish for study that the other has. I have hopes however that he will improve. Please to write me concerning them as often as necessary and you will confer a particular obligation on Yours with esteem."

The following letters, written by the boys to their cousin Heman who had been adopted by Ira Allen on the death of Heman's father, and who now, because of the absence of Ira from Vermont, was acting as the head of the family, are dated later in the same year.

"Sir,

The same old saying now to be continued, that is, there is more and more wanting. Money alas! has fled from our board and we have none to help ourselves with. Yet it has not gone unnecessarily. The place that we board at I do not like. And for this reason. They have a great many hired men and they generally must have their victuals first which makes it after study hours before we can get to the College, which makes it inconvenient getting our lessons. Often when we go to breakfast we are hindered till after eight and we generally go before seven; and there is often as much time lost at dinner. So much time lost puts us back much in our studys. These things considered I think it would be much better for us to board nearer College. I think it is likely that Granpapa may think its better to board there on account of having to walk further. But we generally walk out in the evening chusing the day for studying. My eyes have got to be so weak lately that it is with great difficulty that I am able to keep up with my class and have nearly lost all hopes of ever being able to go through College. If I do not go through I think I might attain a midling education (and better than some of the seignior class have) by going in to a store where there is books or having the books that are studyed in College and be in any store where there is not so much business done that I could have any leazure time. I sent for one yard of cloth but I have not received any so that I have to wear one pair of pantaloons all the time. Such is my present situation. We have longed for ma, ma, but in vain the fates appear to have decreed that we shall not see her this quarter. Zimri has now recovered his health but has got a habit of laying on the bed a considerably in which he spends much time he has however got 30 lines in Virgil.

Adieu.

Ira H. Allen"

"Mr. Heman Allen

The tutor thinks for my class to go into Delphin Virgil and I have got one that the owner will sell for one Dollar which is considered very cheap. Zimri like wise wants a new hat, or if you think best we can get our hats made for two Dollars each.

One thing more, I have to study with my old specticle as yet, but have now found one that suits me but have not anything to pay for [Continued on page 18] appreciation of what is meant by the scientific method. One by-product of the project has been a heavier demand on the instructor's time because more individual conferences are requested by the students. This, however, is just what we hoped would happen, for it is an indication of increased interest and challenge to the student. In addition more time is required to organize and prepare for each experiment in the new program than has been the case with the traditional work. If, however, the student is receiving more value from his laboratory experience, we feel the additional time and effort expended is well worthwhile. I might add that the whole project was conceived and developed as much for the non-science major as for the science major, because we felt that it was of paramount importance to have the limited laboratory experience of the non-science major carry as much impact as possible towards an appreciation for the methods and work of the scientist.

The Chemistry Department is faced today with the urgent need of better facilities. This means the construction of a new building or a complete remodeling of the present one. The passage of time has taken its toll on such things as plumbing, wiring, and laboratory benches to the point where emergency "stop gap repairs" are the rule rather than the exception. The author mentions the problem in this article with the thought in mind that some Alumni and Alumnae reading these words may be in a position to help us in one way or another reach a goal of improved facilities. Since the other science departments housed in the Warner Science building also need modern laboratory facilities, the ideal solution probably would be construction of one modern, fully equipped science building to house all sciences such as has been done in the last few years at such sister institutions in Vermont as Saint Michael's College and Norwich University.

Suggestions and ideas which may be helpful in solving the problem of providing adequate modern laboratory facilities for our young men and women will be welcomed.

A MIDDLEBURY MYSTERY . . .

them. I sold the new ones I brought with me."

Zimri writes to Heman, September 22, 1805:

"I received your letter of the 19th ult. and was happy when I read the contents. We saw in your letter no money which you mentioned and thought for a long time that it had been taken out but going to the Post Office we found another letter which appeared to have been written by Mr. Fay there we found three bills which you mentioned in your letter. We have bought two Ciceros and are about to buy out of money and should be very glad of some. I am Yours Truly, Zimri A. Allen."

A letter written by their mother to Ira and Zimri, dated at Colchester, July 1, 1806, is indicative of the sadly changed conditions in the family of one who had been at one time the most prosperous citizen of the state.

"Dear Ira and Zimri:

You must not think that I can write you a letter every week. My time has been taken up with company . . . and I have so many things to take up my time that cannot write so often as I would be glad to. I want to know what you do with your money; week before last I sent you two dollars which was all the money I had and have had none since, Heman has been at home once since I wrote you last but he had no money, he is now gone again and I do not expect him until next week Saturday. (I have) been and borrowed ten dollars for you which with what I sent the other day that is week before last makes 42 dollars that you have had since you left home in the spring. My dear boys, there is nothing in my power that is consistent with reason and your happiness that I shall not do with the greatest satisfaction, but we now find a great many difficulties to encounter but I am not without hopes of seeing better days although I make no dependence upon it noing that disappointments are more likely to fall to our lot than any thing else. The money that I now send you I wish you to pay the Doctor and your board at Mr. Goodridge and wait with patience until you can have more, but not think of running home because you cannot have every wish gratified the very moment you want it, I should be very much offended to have you come home for such an errand as that, you ought to submit cheerfully to your fate when you know we are doing every thing in our power for you—you inform me Ira's eyes are worse which distresses me very much. I should think he had better tarry until commencement and not study much but have his tutor read to him. Write often and let me know if there is any alteration in this. Our garden is a most excellent one we had the first mess of green peas the 25 of June—the plum trees—fuller than I ever saw them, they will be ripe when you return after commencement as to salmon there has been but one caught this spring or summer and that was taken by Mr. Ames. We have a barrel of shad. I sent you one pair of socks last week which you make no mention of receiving and next week I shall send you another pair and some neckcloths. I talk some of going to Swanton to-morrow in the stage. If I do I shall not return until one week."

The evidence would seem conclusive that both Ira and Zimri were once students at Middlebury. The fact remains, however, that the college records, which are supposed to be complete, both for graduates and non-graduates, make no mention of either as ever having been enrolled at the college.

There is, it would seem, but one likely explanation of the apparent mystery. At the time the boys were supposed to have entered both were very young, sixteen and seventeen years old, respectively. Schools were scarce and expensive and many boys entering college were prepared by individual tutors—pastors of churches and lawyers in the different communities. In the absence of records to the contrary, a logical explanation of the correspondence quoted above would seem to be that the boys were, indeed, as the letter to Gamaliel Painter would indicate, intended to be entered at Middlebury and had been sent there for final preparation under the aegis of one of the tutors at the college. The textbooks mentioned, the general circumstances and the internal evidence of the orthography in the letters from the boys, coupled with the fact that both were enrolled at the University some five years later, would seem to bear out this view. It seems improbable that members of a family so prominent in the state as that of Ira Allen could have matriculated at the college without some note of the fact appearing in the college records. All this is mere speculation, however. The truth will probably never be known unless some more enlightening correspondence is discovered in the annals of a century and a half ago.

Judge Lawrence was admitted to the bar in 1904 and shortly afterwards entered into partnership with Frederick Bryant, '00. In 1908 he was appointed U. S. Commissioner and in 1917 he was elected district attorney of Franklin county. He was elected county judge in 1925 and served in that office until elected supreme court justice in 1933.

Governor Dewey appointed him in Jan. 1945 to serve on the appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York, a position which he held until his retirement in 1947. Judge Lawrence served as a trustee of Middlebury for five years. He received an honorary degree of LL. D. from Middlebury in 1941. In 1905 he married Lillian Trussell. His wife survives him together with a son, Ellsworth, Middlebury 1929.

Dorothy Graves Russell, '01

Dorothy Graves Russell (Mrs. George) died on Dec. 5 in a Bennington, Vt. hospital. She was born June 25, 1877 in Springfield, Mass. After receiving her degree from Middlebury in 1901 she taught languages in Vermont and New York high schools until 1910 when she married Dr. George Russell. Her husband survives her. Dorothy Canfield Fisher says of her "With her death Arlington loses one of the most remarkable, most intellectual, most original and musically most skilled personalities the town has ever known; and Dr. Russell loses a devoted and dearly cherished wife. For 40 years they shared life in loving unity, through storms and sunshine, with a comradely closeness which has made their life an inspiration."

Pauline Helms Howden, '15

Pauline Helms Howden (Mrs. Gilbert) died on Sept. 11 at the Deaconess Hospital in Boston. She was born on Apr. 2, 1893 in Boston, Mass. After graduation from Middlebury she was a student at N. Y. School of Social Work for a year and also studied later at Columbia and Ohio State; she was a social worker at the Church of all Nations in Boston during 1916-17. Surviving him are his wife, the former Barbara Crouch, Middlebury '30 and three children, William, Martha and Stephen.

Frank B. Hickcox

Frank B. Hickcox was not an alumnus of Middlebury College, but the NEWS LETTER feels that he should be mentioned in this column by virtue of the fact that seven of his eight children have attended the College, and the husband of Judge Hickcox's eighth child also attended Middlebury. Listed among his children who did attend Middlebury are: Howard, '32, Charles, '34, Curtis, '34, Arthur, '41, Mary, '43, Charlotte, '45 and F. Brensen (Jr.), '50. Frederick Camp, '38, married the daughter who did not attend Middlebury. Edward Hickcox, '26 (Hon. '54) is a brother of Judge Hickcox who died on December 12th at the age of 69 years after serving for 23 years as Judge of Probate in Watertown, Conn.

A third generation of the Hickcox family will start in Middlebury next fall when Howard Hickcox's daughter—Oberlyn, plans to matriculate at the College. Charles Hickcox has a son at the Taft School in Connecticut who is also making plans to enter Middlebury. The wife of Charles Hickcox is the former Miriam Smith, '35.
